The fire was caused by an exploding oil stove in the room in which the children were sleeping. The parents were awakened by the odor of smoke. They were prevented from entering the room by a heavy curtain, which was in flames. Solark then dashed to the yard and attempted to enter through a window but was again driven back by the flames.

Father Badly Burned.

Braving death, he then went back into the house and rushed the curtain of flames to where the children were lying. His hands and face fearfully burned he carried the tots outside. Then called an ambulance. Two of the children died enroute to a hospital.

287 Passengers Rescued As Ship Burns Are On Way South

Girl, With Rosary And Ukulele, Heroine In Steamer Blaze

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Alongside the heroism of officers and crew of the Clyde liner Mohawk, scuttled in Delaware bay after a fight through a relentless winter storm and against fire which gnawed the length of the ship's hold, stands the bravery of a girl, who was among the 287 passengers safely brought ashore.

Fifteen of the passengers and 80 members of the crew arrived in New York early today, bringing the story of the pluck with which Miss May Cullen faced the situation.

A rosary and ukulele were her simple instruments. As the panicky kneeled in a brief prayer. Later 3 passengers gathered in the cabin, the smoke eddied up from the hold, she kept terror at bay as she led them through the syncopated measures of "It Tint Gonna Rain No More."

Traditions of the American merchant marine were honored in the courage of the 'black gang' which stood by in the smoke-filled stoke hole while the ship headed towards Delaware breakwater. They stayed at their posts until the ship was beached.

Mrs. Martha Mattingly and Mrs. Gladys Stanton, stewardess, stayed with the ship until the last passengers had been transferred to the tanner Kickapoo.

Steamer Believed Total Loss.

The Mohawk today lies in 40 feet of water in Delaware bay, having been scuttled by her master, Captain John M. Staples, who said this was the only way to put out the fire in the hold and save part of his ship. The Clyde line officials said they believed the Mohawk is a toral loss.

FASCISTI MOB ATTACKS PISA LODGE, WRECKS PRINTING SHOP

BAN NEWSPAPERS

PISA, Italy, Jan. 3.—Italy's internal dissension flared higher again today with an outbreak of Fascisti here. The black shirts raided the Masonic lodge, then attacked the Messagero Toscano printing plant, devastating it and burning the supply of print paper.

Several prominent politicians were manhandled by the mob, and their homes ransacked.

Tense Situation.

ROME, Jan. 3.—"Facism does not bow to parliamentary manipulation. It resolves to prevent at any price the prevailing reverses which threaten it."

This defiant clause stood out in the Fascist manifesto issued as the chamber of deputies reassembled today. A tense situation has developed as the result of internal conflicts between fascists and republican and radical elements. The press suppression placed in effect by the administration probably will be debated in the chamber."

Premier Mussolini is expected to come to the defense of the Facisti today when he addresses the reconvened chamber of deputies on the internal situation in Italy.

Censorship on News.

It is possible that permission will be requested in the chamber for the prosecution of several Facist deputies, who are charged with irregularities in furthering the Black Shirts' cause.

The electoral bill also is expected to be presented.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—There were evidences today that the Fascist administration has set up a censorship on outgoing news, concurrently with the campaign of suppression of newspapers with anti-Fascist tendencies.

LONDON TELLS FRANCE TO PAY

Britain Demands Sum Paris Intends to Send to U. S.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Great Britain will stand firm in its policy that France, in liquidating its war debts, shall pay to England sums equal to those France pay to the United States.

This viewpoint has been "informally communicated" to the United States government, the British foreign office announced today. "The attitude of Britain has not been communicated to France or Italy, it was said.

While Great Britain will not demand that France shall consider England a favored nation, it would not refuse to accept such recognition, it was pointed out.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Administration officials today evisioned a long and tedious period of negotiations over the funding of the $4,000,000,000 French war debt.

If the Clementel note, now reported en route to Washington, bears out the summaries of it that have been cabled in press dispatches from Paris, it is considered a foregone conclusion here that the terms proposed by France will prove wholly unacceptable to the United States.

These terms are understood to be:

1—A moratorium of ten years:

2—An interest rate of one half of one per cent.

3—Payments to be made over a period of 90 years.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—There are certain phases of the 10-year moratorium and 80 year payment plan suggested by Finance Minister Clementel that are not acceptable to the United States government.

This was evident in governmental circles today when it was said that United States Ambassador Herrick would not tranmit Clementel's unofficial memorandum to Washington until Clementel had agreed to a revision.

Herrick himself was not inclined to discuss the changes.

Where lords and ladies deign to pass,
We cut the weeds and mow grass;
But less pretentious vacant lots

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Stocks of the radio and oil companies led the stock market into another violent rally in prices in the short session today. Radio was the magic word which fired the speculative imagination of stock traders in every part of the country and orders poured in for stocks of companies directly or remotely connected with the new industry. The spurt in oil stocks which opened auspiciously yesterday was continued in full force with Standard Ooils in the listed market and on the curb in the lead, and prominent independent oils in active trading, advancing a fraction to two points.

The improvement in the money situation was reflected in the 3½ per cent increase in the cash reserves of the New York Federal Reserve bank; mercantile agencies reported conditions favorable for the continuation of business expansion and business leaders poured forth a volume of optimistic predictions and traders from all over the country rushed in to buy stocks.

With radio corporation absorbing a heavy volume of profit taking, attention was concentrated on stocks of other companies manufacturing radio apparatus of any kind. Westinghouse continued its spectacular course and rose eight points to 83 in the first hour. Electric Storage Battery gained five points at 70¼; Bosch Magneto was up at 53½. Stromberg and Hayes Wheel led the market in the Motor Accessories and Studebaker in the Motor stocks.

United States Steel sold at 1.23¼ today thus smashing all of its price record since 1917. American Can came to life and marched up 7 points to record high at 1.68.

Sentiment with respect to the Oil Industry and the oil stocks has undergone a complete change in the last few days. The enormous stocks of Crude oil in storage, instead of being considered a menace to the industry, are held to be necessary to meet the enormous requirements of consumption this year.

Southern Railway sold above 80 for the first time in its history at the head of the Railroad shares which were uniformly strong though not as active as the industrials.

cuing boats—the revenue cutter Kickapoo and the tugs Mars and Kaleen from the Queen Anne pier.

According to an officer of the Mohawk the fire was discovered by Miss Amelia Buckley, of New York, a passenger at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Members of the crew declared the fire was discovered earlier. Miss Buckley was in her room when she detected smoke and coming out into the corridor she said she noted heavy clouds of smoke which filled the entire ship from hold to upper deck.

Prayers Said In Social Hall.

Stories told by passengers and members of the Mohawk's crew agree that Thursday night was one of danger, dread and excitement. Prayers were said in the crowded social hall of the doomed vessel while smoke filled the place.

As the fire came nearer the intense heat, declared one of the ship's officers, drove some of the passenger's out into the storm on open deck. All wore life preservers. Several women fainted. Some of the men demanded from the ship's officers that something be done immediately to save them from death.

Captain Staple's determination to save his ship added to the passenger's terror it is said. He tried to get his ship to Philadelphia and only gave up the attempt when the officers of the coast guard cutter Kickapoo agreed with him that the destruction of the Mohawk was inevitable, declared a member of the cutter's crew.

Passengers Indignant.

It was that battle to save the ship, it is said, that brought the storm of indignation from the passengers after they were landed.

One passenger, Dr. D. Villamena, of 77 East 283rd street, New York, declared that the passengers were "placed in deadly peril of our lives and we lost all our baggage because the ship was not landed and aid not accepted when the fire was discovered."

President Coolidge O. K.'s Compromise Postal Rate Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—President Coolidge today approved the compromise postal rate bill drafted by the joint postal committee of congress.

His approval of the lower rates adopted after newspaper publishers had protested against the proposed increases was voiced to Senator Moses, Republican, of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee of the special sub-committee which held hearings on the postal bill.

Although the rate increases agreed upon by administration leaders are not as high as those recommended by Postmaster General New, with White House approval, the president told Moses that he believed the new bill was scientifically drawn, and that it would operate to offset the $68,000,000 increase in the salaries of postal employes.

Three Persons Injured.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3—Nine persons, eight of them children, met death in two fires in North Montreal early today.

The fire broke out while families still were asleep and firemen who found the bodies, could not determine whether the children had been suffocated or died while trying to escape.

A boy and two girls were victims in one fire. A woman and five children died in the second fire. Three persons were removed to hospitals for treatment for burns and injuries, and a score of persons had narrow escapes from death.

Overheated Stove Blamed.

The dead:

[illegible]lor, 9; Freda Newell, 10; Helen Newell, 11; unidentified Greek woman; Lionel Brault, 9; Rene Thouin, 12; Cecile Thouin, 9; Romeo Thouin, 3; and Emallenne Thouin, 6.

Both fires are supposed to have been caused by overheated stoves.

Mr. and Mrs. Al. Taylor, parents of the Taylor children, returned to their home about 1 o'clock in the morning, having been spending the evening with friends. When they reached the house it was in flames.

Taylor rushed inside to rescue the children, but was driven back by the [illegible] heat. His wife, realizing the impending tragedy, fainted. When the ruins had cooled, the bodies of the children were found amid the ashes of their bed.

Snow Bank Saves Woman.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—A woman physician, Dr. Marie Lederer, was burned to death, a snow bank saved the life of another woman, when she jumped two stories, half a dozen persons had narrow escapes and scores of residents of the aristocratic Irving place district shivered in the cold when fire destroyed a rooming house at 71 Irving Place today.

The body of Dr. Lederer, a student at Cornell Medical school, was found near a window on the third floor.

Miss Margaret Hill, who roomed on the third floor, leaped one story to the room of an adjoining building and then jumped two stories into a snow drift. She was only slightly injured.

Mrs. Almeda Colby, also a third floor roomer, who tried to escape in the same way, was caught by a fireman as she neared the snow.

YOUR HEALTH

Keep Your Nails Trimmed and Clean to Keep Healthy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

A PHYSICAL defect of any kind is unpleasant to look at and very hard to bear. There are many defects which are noticeable only to the person afflicted. Of these, defects of the nails are perhaps the most common.

Some of these defects are simple and easily corrected. Others are more serious in that it is almost impossible to correct these troubles, or even to improve them. It is fortunate indeed that the majority of the nail defects are of the simple types.

Ingrowing nails of the fingers and toes are very common. We all know that the most common cases of ingrown nails are due to poorly-fitting shoes. Ingrown finger-nails are found among women workers whose hands are exposed to irritating substances such as washing and scrubbing.

In the majority of these cases, it is found that habitual biting of the nails aggravates the trouble. The [illegible] the cuticle grows tightly to the edge of the nail.

"Hang-nails," as they are commonly called, are painful. They come from inattention to the care of the nails.

The cuticle grows tight to the nail at the corners and then it tears away leaving the rough and broken pieces. These tear deeper and deeper getting into the flesh and possibly becoming infected.

You can see why it is important to give special attention to the care of your nails. The cuticle should be kept pushed back from the nails, the corners carefully cut and any rough edges cut off.

Many people have white spots on the nails. Bruises from manicure instruments, husking corn, lime and other injuries cause these. There is little that can be done to overcome this trouble because the nail-bed itself is injured.

Ringworms, eczema of the fingers, bacterial infections, all travel rapidly to the base of the nail, causing infection there.

Eczema is the most common cause of nail infections. As the eczematous condition of the fingers spreads, it attacks this thin nail and in turn the nail-bed. As soon as this happens the nail becomes loosened at the base, there is pus and serous discharge.

The result is that this nail has to be removed to allow the infection to clear up and the new nail to come in smooth and straight. Splinters, rusty nails and other foreign bodies under the nails cause serious trouble in many instances.

Most persons give little or no thought to the nails. They seem to believe the nails are of little importance. This is an erroneous impression. Great care should be taken of the hands and nails.

Unclean hands and unclean nails carry many germs that in turn carry disease. If for no other reason than this, the nails should be given careful attention.

2.—My tonsils are very large. Would you advise me to have them removed, and if so is it dangerous for one at the age of thirty years to have this operation performed?

A.—Many conditions would cause this trouble. You should have an ear specialist examine your ear to see what is causing the discharge.

• • •

M. W. Q.—Is it possible to remove hair from the face by means of the electric needle, and where can I go for this treatment?

A.—Yes, the hair can be removed by means of the electric needle, but this must be done by an expert. Apply at any of the large hospital clinics and they will advise you regarding treatment.

I. L. Q.—I have puffs under my eyes. How can I remedy this condition?

FLORIDA TRIP ENDS FATALLY

Sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble Killed in Accident at Miami.

Although details are still lacking, the report of the accidental death of Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland, sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble of this city and a member of a Florida motoring party headed by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Riverside avenue, was confirmed today by Charles Russell of Riverside avenue, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Gamble.

Mrs. Cramston, it is understood, was almost instantly killed Wednesday in an automobile accident which occurred near Miami, Florida, where the party was visiting.

The only other information contained in the message from Mr. Gamble to his daughter, Mrs. Russell, and her husband, was that no other member of the party had been injured and that they were starting northward immediately with the body of Mrs. Cramston.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell expect to leave here this afternoon for Cleveland, where they will join Mr. and Mrs. Gamble and the latter's sister.

The party which left Wellsville on Dec. 2 for Miami by motor included, besides Mr. and Mrs. Gamble, the latter's three sisters, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Pa.; Mrs. Mildred Bryant and Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland.

They had planned an indefinite stay in the southern state.

Mrs. Cramston was born and reared in Beaver, Pa., the daughter of the late Robert J. and Mildred Connor of Beaver. She spent her early life there. Her husband has been dead for several years.

She is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Lewis H. Trotter of Wellsville, James R. Trotter of Beaver, William H. Trotter of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Wellsville and Mrs. Mildred Bryant of Cleveland.

Arrangements for the funeral services will be completed upon the arrival of the body in Cleveland.

AMERICAN THEATRE

3 Days Starting Monday

Virginia Valie and Milton Sills In Cinema Sensation

Life in another world, the world of yesterday, is pictured dramatically in "A Lady of Quality," the Universal-Jewel screen transcription of the Frances Hodgson Burnett novel of that name, coming to the American theatre Monday.

London of 1700 is far away from the modern world of 1923-4. Customs, manners, clothes, architecture and belief of that day are little like those of today. Yet the basic elements of human nature, as the photoplay reviews them, were much the same. Men loved women and conquered kingdoms for them. And men made love to women and forget them, quite in line with inexplicable but unchanging laws of human nature.

Virginia Valli is the star. She is the exquisite leading woman who gained exceptional honors for her work in "The Storm" and other big Universal specials.

Icelander Will Come to City With San Carlo Opera Co.

One of grand operas most interesting characters, an Icelander, will come to East Liverpool with the San Carlo Grand Opera company when that novel organization presents "Madame Butterfly" at the Ceramic theatre on Thursday evening, Jan. 15. He is Amund Sjovik (pronounced Shove-ick) and he will sing the leading bass role in the production. This is his first American season, having joined the San Carlo force upon his arrival here from a triumphant tour of the European continent where he sang all of the leading bass roles in the greatest opera houses in the world.

Coincident with the arrival here of the great Finnish athlete, Paave Nurmi, who broke three world's records in one afternoon during the recent Olympic games in Paris, considerable interest has been focused on the Scandinavian races. Now, with a Scandinavian singer coming to the front and creating one of the musical sensations of the present opera season, this interest is increased. Year by year the Nordic races gather in new laurels in the sports or the arts, and it is not far off when they will be listed among the leaders of every field of activity.

When interviewed on this subject some time ago, Mr. Sjovik said that the manner of living of the northern peoples had much to do with their success in the various fields of activity. He says that the climate lends added zest and impetus to their work, and that they do not enjoy the many modern conveniences, which are in themselves softening and which reduce the amount of virility and endurance which is the property of the human being. He explains the power of his voice by his own powerful physique, and says that strenuous exercise and work brought this about.

If, as suggested, one can do better thinking while taking a hot bath, authors will find the Underwater Floatable Typewriter a great convenience.

Naval Expenses

Figures don't lie, and it would be hard even for a lying figurer to misrepresent the meaning of certain mathematical facts regarding the American and Japanese naval situation.

What rival powers are spending on their navies ought to be a pretty fair index to the rate at which they are developing their comparative naval strength. Records show that the United States has been spending on her navy, right along, not only a great deal more than Japan, but a great deal more proportionately than is called for by her present ratio of five-to-three in warships.

Only one year in the past five, the 12 months ending last March, has Japan spent half as much as this country. For the present fiscal year she is spending $112,000,000 to our $300,000,000. For the five-year period ending with the year 1924-1925 her total will be $883,000,000 to our $2,107,000,000.

Very likely Japan gets more warships per dollar than we do, but she can hardly get as much for $3 as we get for $7.

Brains and Football

The criticism that football calls for nothing but brawn and is therefore crowding brains out of the colleges and universities is of course an exaggerated statement of a condition that does have some unsatisfactory aspects. Another side is brought to light in the announcement that the captain of the University of Missouri football team has recently been selected a Rhodes scholar.

Many other colleges and universities could point out successful athletes who were also good students, maintaining honestly high standards in their academic work without any favoritism from faculty or fellow-students.

It is possible that there would be still more such happy examples of combined athletic and scholastic attainments if the public attitude toward the intellectually successful undergraduate were improved a little. No school has yet organized a cheering section to inspire and honor the pupil who does sound work in library, laboratory and class room. Very few institutions of higher learning give coveted school letters to the men and women who pass all their courses. Perhaps this is because passing courses is expected of every student while athletic prowess is looked upon as a special service to the school.

The ideal system of education should develop physical health along with mental training and character.

Public Leadership

Bewailing the general lack of political leadership today, William Allen White says, in his Emporia Gazette:

"This world will prosper only when reason removes the evils of the world. Force cannot conquer the evils. And reason will come to men through wise, tolerant, courageous leadership. The best leadership of the world is going not into politics, but into business. Politics in the world today is getting only the left-overs."

It does look so, in many lands, and generally speaking, it is so in America. "Who can say," asks the Emporia sage, "how to attract great men back into politics, where they ruled the earth half a century ago?"

That is the nut for present-day civilization to crack. Government is really more important than it ever was before, or capable of being more important, because it touches such vast interests and affects the welfare of mankind in so many different ways.

Some critics attribute the mediocrity of our present public life to the direct primary and lament the passing of the old-time political convention. Conventions possessing real power did train leaders, whatever their moral defects were. It may prove wise to modify the new system and permit more of the old-fashioned opportunity for organization and the wielding of personal force in politics.

But that will not solve the whole problem. Perhaps it will never be solved until the public attitude toward life changes again, and the ablest men grow weary or dissatisfied with mere business success and turn with new interest to public careers for an outlet of their energies. That will surely come in time, and the time may be nearer than we think.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

TEN MILLION PANCAKES

Berlin celebrated the New Year's arrival by eating 300,000 carp, favorite German fish, and 10,000,000 pfannekuchen. If they were the full sized German pancakes, 10,000,000 were many.

In great American cities, the New Year was welcomed with bootleg whisky that would strip the varnish from the steel wall of a Pullman car.

The New Year is under way. Soon we shall have acquired the habit of writing 1925, instead of 1924, and then the New Year will be an old story.

At the end of 1925 you will easily recognize those unable to take a New Year seriously. They will be about where they were a year before.

FORD'S NEW FACTORY

How big will the Henry Ford concern be when it is full grown? Ford begins 1925 with 6,000,000 more square feet of floor space in his buildings than he had one year ago. That would mean a new factory 100 feet wide, and 60,000 feet long. Quite an expansion.

The bigger he grows, the better, while he continues his efforts to give the people more value for less money. They like to see big fortunes of the Henry Ford type.

If Mr. Ford would devote a few million feet of floor space to garage use at low rates for owners of little cars in big cities, he would help the people and the automobile industry. Car production is a problem solved. The cheap garage is still to come.

A FRANKLIN SIMON PLAN

Merchants all over the country will be interested in a customer's garage plan devised by Franklin Simon, of Fifth avenue, New York.

Mr. Simon has employes to take charge of cars that reach his store, and because of congestion and police rules, cannot be parked nearby. He provides garage space, not far from the store. His chauffeurs take away cars driven by owners, bringing them back to the store entrance when ordered. And the car is insured, free, against damage while in custody of Franklin Simon employes.

This, the first conspicuous effort to deal with New York's problem of street congestion, is important to other cities.

The president told 3,000 scientists in Washington that society and government no longer fear the results of the scientist's search for truth. There are, however, some representatives of old-fashioned religion that still fear and denounce scientific discoveries.

They shuddered when Galileo announced that a round earth goes around the sun. They said "the earth stands still and the entire universe whirls around it. The Bible says so," and they would have burned Galileo for telling the truth had he not wisely got down on his knees, solemnly abjuring, denying and detesting what he knew to be the truth.

Everybody not steeped in superstition knows that the earth is hundreds of millions of years old. Everybody knows that primitive men, with huge jaws and teeth, more like baboons than humans, lived on this earth at least a quarter of a million years ago. And everyone knows and admits, unless he denies the evidence of his senses, that animals lived here endless millions of years before men came, changing through the years by the slow process of evolution.

Yet there are men, normal and sane in other respects, that deny evolution.

If society and government are reconciled to science, as President Coolidge says, that is good news. The story told in White's "Conflict Between Science and Theology" is an almost incredible record of human brutality, ignorance and superstition.

The national health department takes steps to "prevent the spread of bubonic infection among rats." Why not kill the rats that harbor the fleas that infect human beings with the disease?

Killing a few rates here or there in some "rat week" based on panic, or getting rid of mosquitoes that carry yellow fever in a few localities, does little good.

JAPAN LACKS IRON

Robert Lansing, once secretary of state, forcibly removed by Woodrow Wilson somewhat as a dentist removes a tooth, has discovered that there is no danger whatever of war between the United States and Japan.

Why do you ask?

For th "reason," if you please, that Japan hasn't enough iron to carry on a war.

Mr. Lansing apparently imagines that war still depends on the firing of large round iron bullets.

Did Mr. Lansing notice that one of the Japanese ships, unfortunately on fire at night, was carrying to Japan a very large cargo of nitrates? Nitrates give the kick to explosive bombs. And such bombs, plus poisonous gases that would destroy a whole city, not many tons of large round iron bullets, will decide the next war.

That the British empire means to rule the air, with the world's best air fleet, as it has hitherto ruled the old-fashioned oceans, is perfectly clear and much to the credit of British statesmanship.

The British are building giant dirigibles for air mail service from England to India in peace big enough to carry troops for fighting with a capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

And England goes ahead with this program in spite of the fact that the highly dangerous and deadly hydrogen gas must be used. The United States has practically a monopoly on helium gas, which makes the dirigible safe.

We also assuredly have money to build ships. You are assured also by able financiers that it won't hurt the country to lend one billion a year to private borrowers in Europe. It would not hurt us to spend one-tenth of a billion on flying.

What we lack is the imagination that looks a few years ahead.

The Russian Soviet government has just ordered 100 fighting airplanes from Fokker, the Dutch builder. British engineers will be put in the flying machines, in good condition, as are owned by this glorious, rich nation in the world.

If a "bankrupt" Bolshevik government can afford to order and pay for 100 modern fighting machines, couldn't the United States afford a thousand and train the men to run them?

How long is Uncle Sam to remain like a fat grocerman sitting at his front door, unarmed, waiting for some gunman to fly across the water and hold him up?

A rumor, via Berlin, that Trotzky is in a Moscow prison, takes you back to revolutionary days at the end of the eighteenth century in Paris.

Danton, sent by Robespierre, went to prison and thence to the guillotine.

Robespierre, when his turn came, went to prison and then with broken jaw, but courage intact, took his turn under the guillotine blade.

Marat ruled for a little while from his bath tub, but Charlotte Corday made a call in his bathroom and that was the end of Marat.

Revolution, beginning in murder, usually ends as it began. Those that cut off the heads of others lose their own.

The usual rule will presumably work in Russia. The man of real courage and brains comes out on top. Trotzky, with a big Red army behind him, seemed to be that man. But one moment's hesitation at the wrong time means death.

This is the time for Russian leaders to study Peter the Great. There was no hesitation about him.

Lord Robert Cecil says some dictator will arise and rule in Russia. Trotzky has the chance to be that man.

The Powerful Ka[illegible]tle Brother— By Fontaine Fox

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By CHARLES A. SMITH.

LONDON, Jan. 3—One of the biggest and most sensational achievements in the history of radio broadcasting will be seen in Britain's super-airship R-101, shortly to be built.

It is reported that, according to present plans, the airship will have a ballroom fitted with one of the most powerful radio receiving sets in existence, making it possible for the airship's passengers to dance to the music of the world's most famous dance orchestras thousands of miles away. Experts are now working to discover some means of excluding the noise of the engines from the ballroom, and also to find some way of ensuring uninterrupted communication from the land radio stations.

Apart from this unique feature, the airship will have the usual powerful radio sets generally found in super-airships, as well as radio direction finders and other appurtenances.

The English radio concern, the British Broadcasting company, is aiming at giving its million patrons the best programs money can produce.

Besides the usual conglomeration of talks, dancing bands and news bulletins characteristic of the usual broadcasting station, the company is presenting complete operas, musical comedies and tragedies; and such well-known actresses as Lady Tree and the famous veteran tragedienne, Mrs. Kendall, already have spoken into the microphone in connection with these presentations. No expense is spared in the presentations, which are given with full effects—even the sounds of waves beating on the shores, and birds chirping, are achieved by an ingenious combination of stones, water and imitation bird whistling.

Further plans of the British Broadcasting company include the engagement of world-famous concerts artists, musicians and conductors, and the presentation of a series of classical symphony concerts.

Trouble has been encountered in relaying programs from England to Belfast (Ireland) over the submarine cable. Investigation has revealed that, while speech can be transmitted over such a cable fairly well, music becomes distorted and thin.

The popularity of the dance orchestra in England is evidenced by the fact that the Savoy hotel dance bands have had their programs wirelessed to "broadcatchers" for two hours every evening for more than a year.

A recent attempt to discontinue the bands on the part of the British Broadcasting company met with strong opposition from "broadcatchers," and they still form part of every program relayed in London.

It is felt that one of its greatest uses would be in the teaching of languages—a department in which the English are notoriously weak.

One bold suggestion is that the minister of education should make a yearly grant to the British Broadcasting company, which would be expended in the transmission on two mornings a week of a progressive language course, specializing in pronunciation.

It is stated there will be a further World Radio Week early in 1925, when attempts at international communication will be made.

German stations are revising their wave lengths according to reports here. They now use waves of between 350 and 450 metres.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The big salaries made by stage stars are rarely turned to good account. More than half of them eventually strike bankruptcy shoals. George M. Cohan is rich, but most of his money was made in the production end.

Fred Stone's wealth was made largely in lucky real estate ventures. He is often reputed to be the richest American actor, yet some consider it significant that his father recently opened up a barber shop in Great Neck.

Otis Skinner is fairly well to do. James K. Hackett is a millionaire, but his was an inheritance. The actor who has perhaps made the biggest showing on his salary alone is Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator. He has played almost continuously for 20 years.

Eltinge is soon to retire to look after his ranch at Alpine, Cal. Will Rogers is thrifty and owns a home in New York and California, but as New York considers wealth he is not so rich. David Warfield has profited largely by sound investments.

There are a few others of wealth, but when you consider the large number of stars the list is comparatively small. Each season brings its quota of benefits for those whose names once burned in letters of fire against the Broadway heavens.

Living in the world of illusion, the stage player often brings it into the world of reality. Money becomes the same value of stage money. Then, too, there is the wardrobe to keep up and other expensive items in the eternal splurge the players feel they must maintain.

Eddie Cantor, who has made enormous salaries for many years, admitted that until recently when he put his affairs in hands of a bank he had never saved a cent and was in debt. Cantor is a home loving fellow who does not drink or smoke. Yet he could not save.

Down in an armor factory on Front street is a near sighted, mild mannered little man who might be taken for a bookkeeping druge. Yet he has faced 5,000 bullets aimed at his heart without a tremor. The human target makes his living facing bullets for an armor vest corporation. He has been the demonstrator for many years. The vest he wears weighs about nine pounds. It is constructed of patented graphite and metal plates fitted in sections. The armor looks very much like a tailored vest and can be made to match the suit.

He is an old ocean greyhound who plies the liners to gamble for high stakes. I have seen him here and abroad always where the lights are brightest. He is married and has three boys who are being educated at an exclusive school. He claims to be square in all his gambling and says that he has made it an invariable rule to save 10 per cent of his winnings. By doing this he also says he has $100,000 invested in high grade securities. Yet he points the inevitable moral with: "I'd give all I have had I never touched a card. It is a terrible thing to realize that three fine sons will eventually know that their father was a professional gambler."

Broadway now has a million dollar ballroom which is to be devoted to the uplift of the dance. It is at Broadway and Fifty-third street and it will attempt to join good manners and good taste with good time. It is to be the sort of place where the entire family may go for wholesome amusement. Most public dance halls in New York are tough resorts where "hostesses" are really women of bad repute and where young "cadets" seek to ensnare unsuspecting young womanhood. There will also be high class professional dancing numbers on the stage. The new ballroom is being watched with interest by those who seek to reform the dance.

CANCER MENACE GROWS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Despite the eternal vigilance that the United States government is maintaining over the health of the people, one much dreaded disease is extending its ravages in a death toll gradually mounting from year to year. This disease is cancer.

Figures secured simultaneously from the bureau of census and from the United States public health service, the only two government agencies from which accurate information as to the disease can be secured, point to the same fact, namely, that cancer is gradually increasing, in marked contrast with other diseases and ailments on which the health agencies of the nation have been waging unremitting warfare.

Reports and rumors of cures for this obscure disease reach the public from time to time as to the efficacy of these cures the public health service is silent, while at the same time all the resources of the bureau are engaged in a battle with this invisible enemy. Reluctantly, but nevertheless frankly, the surgeon general and his aides concede that the moment cancer is increasing its margin.

According to the figures of the bureau of census, 86,754 deaths from cancer were reported last year in a registration area composed of territory containing 87.6 per cent of the total population. This represented an increase of 5,816 deaths over 1922. The rate per 100,000 of the population was 88.4 against 86.5 for the previous year.

The bureau estimates that if the unregistered areas, which were comparatively small, maintained the same ratio of deaths, cancer caused 99,000 deaths in the fiscal year 1923-24 as compared with 95,000 for the previous year.

In the case of cancer as compared with other disease tabulated, the figures were adjusted so as to allow for differences in age and sex distribution of the population because, generally speaking, the ravages of the disease hit people in middle life and old age, and consequently a state with a larger proportion of aged may be expected to have more deaths from the disease than a state where the proportion of aged is not so large.

The adjusted figures for 34 states show that in 23 of them cancer fatalities increased. The highest rate was 102.6 per 100,000 for New York and the lowest 52.2 in South Carolina. New York state had a death roll of 12,247 against 11,697 in the previous year; Pennsylvania had 8,253 as compared with 7,782; Illinois 6,636 against 6,440; Ohio 4,760 against 4,637; California 4,693 against 4,447; Michigan 3,516 against 3,441; Mississippi 3,176 against 2,947, and New Jersey 3,162 against 3,021. Wyoming had the lowest number of cancer fatalities with 116 last year compared with 97 for the year before.

The special investigation of the public health service into the various phases of the disease covered 10 states which comprised the registration area in 1900. They are Connecticut, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Vermont. These states were taken because they constituted a fairly homogeneous area both from a population and geographical standpoint.

OLDER PEOPLE ARE VICTIMS

Without going into details of the number of deaths per hundred thousand, Assistant Surgeon General A. M. Stimson, who has charge of the division of scientific research of the public health service, said that the death rate for all forms of cancer has shown a steady and practically continuous rise in these states since 1900. As far as the younger age groups are concerned no changes of great moment are apparent in the death rates. Commencing, however, with the age groups 30-39, a tendency toward increase becomes more marked with each successive decade. Summarizing the results of the investigation, Assistant Surgeon General Stimson said:

"As a result of these studies, it must be concluded that there has been a definite increase in the mortality from cancer in the 10 original registration states, and, moreover, that this is a real and not an apparent increase, which might be accounted for by better diagnosis, shifting of diagnosis, and change in the age constitution of the population."

While not sounding an alarm over the singular phenomenon of a disease increasing its ravages in face of scientific investigation, the public health service regards the disease as one of the major health problems confronting the nation today. Scientists who halt at nothing, not even self-inoculation, if necessary, are working steadily on this major problem in the hygienic laboratory of the public health service. It is safe to say that no medical discovery in two decades would be so universally welcomed by the public at large and acclaimed by the medical world as a cure or a preventive for this dreaded ailment.

The position cancer occupies as an invisible enemy is all the more significant because of the enormous success that the health agencies of the nation have had in combating other diseases that took a heavy toll of life. Warfare, constant and aggressive has practically rid this country of the five great plague diseases—cholera, typhus, yellow fever, bubonic plague and smallpox. There are sporadic outbreaks of the last named, but the toll of life is inconsiderable. They are all under control of accepted remedies and preventives administered by the most militant and vigilant body in the United States, the public health service.

DECREASE IN OTHER DISEASES

What is true of the plagues is equally true of other diseases, the ravages of which have diminished from decade to decade and from year to year. The forces fighting tuberculosis, for instance, are constantly gaining ground on the enemy. The same area that showed a sharp increase for cancer fatalities shows a decrease for tuberculosis fatalities. Last year the latter caused 90,732 deaths as compared with 90,452 in the previous year, but the rate per 100,000 of the population decreased from 97 to 93.6. This shows that cancer as a scourge is catching up with tuberculosis, at least as far as this country is concerned.

The decrease in the fatalities from the latter, according to the public health service, is somewhat greater than that given by the census figures. The significant fact, however, is that since 1900 tuberculosis has dropped from 195.2 deaths per 100,000 of the population to a little over 90 at the present. In other words, the death rate has been reduced to less than half of what it was two decades ago.

An even greater victory has been won against typhoid. In 1900 the victims of this malady numbered 31.3 out of every 100,000 of the population. In 1922 the fatality rate was only 3.9, or roughly one-eighth of what it was 20 years ago. Another scourge which is yielding to science is diphtheria. For the last year 45 states having an aggregate population of approximately 109 millions reported 12,339 deaths from diphtheria as against 14,684 reported by 44 states with a population of approximately one hundred and two millions the previous year.

Except for the standing menace of cancer, so mysterious and so baffling, the story is a story of victory, so much so that in the opinion of the public health service the health conditions of this country today must be regarded as very satisfactory.

One of the serious factors militating against greater progress against the disease enemy, according to Assistant Sugeon General Stimson, is the general tendency throughout the country whereby legislative bodies allot but scanty funds for the development and maintenance of public health agencies in proportion to the importance of their activities to public welfare.

Theft of Diphtheria Culture Tubes Proves Puzzle to Police

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

XX

Karesia had not been asleep when Rossiter had brought his limp burden to her door. Warned by a burning head and chilly feet that she would not sleep until perhaps the dead hour before morning, when strained nerves usually yield to utter weariness, she had put on a negligé and had built a fire in the big room. Mary Bliss had crept to her own room long ago.

It had been all very well to say, under the spur of excitement, "I shall go straight on—the future shall decide," but the more Karesia had pondered, the more certain she became that to "go straight on" was going to be terribly difficult; so much depended on Rossiter's attitude, and, so far, Karesia could not fathom his intentions. Her thoughts were anxious enough, but really what was keeping her awake and watchful was the hope of a message from Dascome, some relief from suspense. For, with eyes opened or closed, she saw him racing along those glassy streets, chasing that mad girl, tearing along to destruction. There would be an accident to one or the other.

Karesia had been asking of the fire questions she could not answer, ears strained, meanwhile, for the telephone, when she heard heavy steps on the gallery. Could it be Dascome? She reached the door before Rossiter had had time to knock. When Karesia opened the door, he was shifting his burden so as to free one hand. For an instant she thought it was Dascome; who the girl was, she had no doubt. Then she saw Rossiter's face and stood petrified; for a moment she could not gasp even his peculiar greeting:

"You don't mean to say you're alone! Doubtless he will appear later. Meantime, here is a reminder, Kara mia—we'll see whether time has made you a little more human," and he stepped in with his burden hanging limp over his shoulder.

Even then, Karesia had not realized. "Rand! Is she hurt much? What——"

"Hurt!" he said sharply. "No. She's drunk—like any mere man! If you want to pack your grip and run to the antipodes, just say so and I'll find some woman who's not so much of a saint that she has no sympathy for a sinner." His vivid blue eyes blazed with scorn and anger. He let his burden slip from his shoulder into his arm and the girl's head dropped back, her fair face, hot and flushed, turned full to the light. "John Dascome's daughter, Kara dear—what shall I do with her?"

As usual, Karesia calmed quickly. "I know who she is, Rand. I am glad she wasn't killed. Bring her up to my room," and she led the way swiftly.

Rossiter had carried Clarice up and had laid her on Karesia's bed, his lips tight, his eyes smouldering. "You see, Kara, even girls all in this way, occasionally—sad but true."

"Shall I telephone for a doctor?" Karesia asked.

"A doctor! No. She'll sleep it off, as I would, or any one else. However, adoration of the father may enable you to lay a little cracked ice on the brow of the daughter—it would be helpful. Sleep will do the rest." He bent and put back gently the hair which had fallen over Clarice's face. "Poor little kid! Don't I know what it's like! A cloth rung out in ice water would be better, Kara."

Karesia turned and almost fell over Mary Bliss who stood shrinking and shaking in the doorway. She caught Karesia's arm. "What has he done to her?" she asked convulsively. "That—man!"

"Hush!" Karesia said. "He is being kind to her! Get the basin in your room and some towels while I get the ice. She has been drinking too much, Mary—that's all."

Mary Bliss scrambled back into her room and Karesia sped downstairs. When she returned, Rossiter was standing, looking about him, at the appointments of her room, the touches of red and orange. When Mary Bliss slid in, hiding herself behind Karesia as much as possible, he looked at her, watched her with interest as she knelt beside the bed. Though evidently in shrinking terror of him—the glance she stole over her shoulder was akin to horror—she seemed more capable in such an emergency than Karesia. He caught her mumbled demand, "Tell him to go away!" It was she who began to unhook Clarice's dress.

"I'll wait downstairs," he said, and turned on his heel.

Rossiter had searched about downstairs until he found the telephone. He had telephoned then to his Japanese boy that he was coming home in a few minutes. Then he went into the big room and waited, his lips compressed, his eyes brilliant, until Karesia came down. He heard her at the telephone, calling up the Hollywood Hotel and asking for Dascome. Evidently they gave her a number, for he heard her call a city number. She received no answer, for she came back into the hall.

He looked at her in the same tight-lipped, vivid way. "He will be along presently, Kara. Don't be impatient."

Karesia paid no attention to the sneer. "Do you know where he is? He ought to be told that she is safe."

"I haven't the faintest idea where he is. I expected to find him here."

"Where did you find her?" Karesia persisted. "Perhaps he has gone there?"

"I was at the Hollywood Hotel for a few minutes tonight and some one came in and said that they had seen Clarice Dascome and a party of people driving like mad to Los Angeles—that they were all of them the worse for what they'd had to drink. I know of that crowd, a man named Deeme is one of them, and I guessed that they would go to his house. I guessed how it would be with her, so I went there and brought her away. What made you think she was hurt?"

"Mr. Dascome and I met her, with those people, coming from Bervely. She was driving at a fearful rate, in that fog. Her father let me out at the Boulevard, then he went after her. He must be searching yet—unless he has had an accident. Those streets!" Karesia was pallied with anxiety. "Can't you—won't you get word to him, somehow?" she begged.

"So you've spent the evening alone," he returned.

Karesia flushed, but she controlled herself. "Yes."

EX-HIGH STARS LAND CONTEST

High Passers Defeated In Floor Game, Score 54 to 30.

Chester high basketball team went down to defeat last evening at the hands of Ex-High on the Rock Springs park floor, score 54 to 30.

The game was witnessed by a good sized crowd of floor fans.

High played a good article of basketball and at times really outplayed the former stars, but the latter with their greater experience had no difficulty in piling up a commanding lead which they held until the finish.

High was the first to score when Bennet tossed a foul goal. Ex-High promptly tied up the game on a similar toss by Johnston. Wyant tossed the first field goal for Ex-High and from this stage the ex-stars began to run up points with Hamilton and Wyant doing most of the scoring. The first half ended with Ex-High leading by a score of 31 to 16.

During the final quarter High drew within eight points of their opponents, but the latter put on steam and soon had the game safely tucked away by a good margin. Greenspun, former local star, was blanked until the final few minutes of play when he succeeded in securing a field goal.

Hamilton and Wyant were the leading scorers for Ex-High making 39 points while Greenspun started many of the plays which resulted in markers. Bennett, Pinney and Simcox performed in good style for High as did Johnston, Cox, Patton and Stevens. Bennett with seven field goals led the scoring for High.

Chester High girls won the preliminary game from East Liverpool High Juniors by a score of 27 to 14. The locals led at the end of the first half by a score of 14 to 7. This margin was increased in the last period of play. Miss Paisley was the star for Chester, scoring all but two of the points made by her team. Misses McElravey and Cooper were the best scorers for the Junior girls.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

COLUMBIANA COUNTY FARMERS ACTIVE DURING PAST YEAR

Accomplishments Pointed Out in Figures From Various Bureaus Devoted to Interest of Agriculturists.

During 1924 applications were received by John G. Houlette, secretary-treasurer of the Columbiana County National Farm Loan association, for loans totaling $98,100, this volume being divided among 29 applicants.

Of this volume of business, 22 loans were closed, aggregating $67,700, and three loans, totaling $4,500, are pending.

During the year, eight loans were rejected, amounting to $33,600, and five loans, aggregating $14,500, were withdrawn.

The capital stock of the association is placed at $30,000 and there has been $11,475 stock issued. Dividends amounting to $531.53 have been paid, according to the annual report.

The association is an active branch of the national farm loan, and has been operating in this county for several years with considerable success.

Considerable activity prevailed in this county last year among farmers who purchased their supplies through the co-operative agencies of the Columbiana County Farm bureau. The largest purchase was cattle feed, there having been bought through co-operative channels 1,192.5 tons.

There was also sold through this channel 520 sacks of sugar and 43 tons of salt. There were 547 bales of twine bought and distributed among the farmers of the county, and 11,011 bushels of certified seed potatoes were shipped into the county.

On top of these purchases, there was also shipped into the county 322.5 tons of fertilizer, and also 6,937 tons of lime. The distribution of all these supplies was under the direction of Field Service Manager Phil E. Heim, and the distribution was made during 11 months last year, beginning with February.

Fifteen townships took an active part in clothing construction work last year, this feature being advanced by the Columbiana County Farm bureau, and first instruction work given by Miss Wirt, clothing specialist of the home economic department of the extension service of Ohio State university.

There were 136 demonstrations held in these 15 townships during the old year, with a total attendance of 920 women. A total of 575 garments were started by these women, and official reports show that 406 were completed.

Township leaders were appointed at the first organization meeting, which was held in Lisbon, and when these leaders returned to their homes meeting and demonstrations were held in these particular townships.

It is interesting to note that many women living in the larger cities of the county became interested in this activity of the farm bureau and sought information about the demonstrations direct from the farm bureau offices.

In all only 10 clubs of various kinds were organized among the boys and girls of the county last year, the four pig clubs being the largest number formed in any one branch of activity. Two clothing clubs were formed and three canning clubs, but only one calf club was organied during the old year.

However, it is recorded that 55 boys and girls started in the market pig class and all carried their work through until the latter part of August.

Last August the market advanced 32 cents per pound and about 50 members of the club took advantage of the market and sold their stock on the rise. Because of this business move those who sold their stocks did not have the opportunity to finish the club work outlined for the season.

Five boys who did complete their pig club work were taken to the Pittsburg stock yards, where they spent the day seeing their stock arrive, graded and sold.

The work of the period for the calf, canning and clothing clubs was finished as scheduled.

Two cow testing associations were formed in this county last year with a total membership of 45 herd owners and representing 672 head of cattle. There were 48 farms in the county adopting improved practices in the sanitary production and care of milk last year.

It is rathering to note that in the Columbiana County Live Stock Shipping association last year 557 members were enrolled, and the Columbiana County Sheep and Wool Growers' association had 231 members.

There were eight members in the County Apple Grading association, and 510 stockholders combined in the Kensington Supply company of Kensington and the Salona Supply company of Salem.

During 1924 County Agent C. E. Rowland, who resigned December 24 to take up similar work in Lorain county, visited 391 different farms and visited 538 farms in conducting extension work. He also visited 12 different homes in the conduct of extension work. There were 240 demonstration meetings held in the rural communities of the county last year, the total attendance being 3,846.

During the seven farm institutes held in the county during 1924 there was a total attendance of 9,135.

CASE IS APPEALED TO HIGHER COURT

The transcript in the case of Jesse T. Bonsall against Ellsworth E. Feicht, which was tried in the court of Justice of the Peace H. E. Gleckler at Salem, has been received in common pleas court, having been carried higher by Feicht on appeal.

Columbiana

According to all reports the prospects for 1925 in Columbiana's various industries are very bright and look much better than they did a year ago. Practically all the shops have been working full time for the past two months and will continue to do so, while those who have not been on full time expect orders this month which will enable them to do likewise. Stock taking is practically over now and some shops worked New Year's Day. Few towns the size of Columbiana are fortunate in having the varied industries to be found there. While the largest employe only a little more than a hundred men and the smallest fifteen or twenty, yet the number and variety compensate for this. Columbiana boasts of a pump factory, a boiler shop, a machine shop specializing in sawmill machinery and engines, another machine shop making tire-building machinery, two foundries, a grease factory, a shop making cement-block machines, a tool works, besides several smaller shops engaged in automobile repair, etc. A valuable addition to these this month will be the Franklin Furniture Co., which is busily engaged in remodeling the old Columbia Tire plant, and expects to move in very shortly.

The usual number of watch parties marked the passing of the old year and the coming of 1925. The Epworth league of the M. E. church celebrated with an entertainment enjoyed by a large number of guests, including some from Leetonia and other nearby towns. Stereopticon views, a program of music and reading, and refreshments weere features of the evening.

The Columbiana Christian Church held a watch party in the church basement at which time 1925 plans for the Sunday school were entered into, and a reorganization affected. A program and refreshments entertained the large audience present.

The local lodge of Knights of Pythias held open house to their friends and families, and anyone that dropped in was made welcome, everything being free to all. An oyster supper was served and dancing enjoyed until the early hours of the New Year.

An interesting event ushering in the New Year was the party given by Miss Helen Coblentz at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Coblentz, to a group of her high school associates. Dancing, cards and other games were enjoyed and delicious refreshments served at an early hour in 1925. Those present were: Misses Helen Lower, Janet Keller, Marian Hartman, Marjory Dieffenbacher, Doris Orr, Jane Baughman and Pauline Sponseller; and Messrs. Lee Bookwalter, Marcus Holloway, George Barr, Harold Burkle, Tromaine Hoffman and Curtis Detwiler.

Columbiana's volunteer fire department started in the New Year in a busy manner, getting their first call at 4:30 a. m. New Years morning, to Fairfield avenue. The floor of the living room in the home of Mrs. S. B. Householder, on Fairfield avenue, had caught fire from an open fireplace, burning a hole in the floor and damaging some of the furniture. Prompt assistance from the neighbors got the blaze under control before the arrival of the firemen, who finished putting out the blaze with their chemical equipment.

A number of Columbiana families celebrated New Year's day by driving to Cleveland to see "The Miracle" at the public auditorius. The group included: Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Felger, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. Wick Frye, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Bassinger and son, Bobby, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clapp and son, Hubert.

The last day of 1924 found the population of Columbiana increased by two, the stork presenting a baby girl to Prof. and Mrs. I. H. Weaver, and a boy to Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Lake.

Mrs. Bernice McMahon and children of Canton returned home after a visit of several days with Mrs. McMahon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Flickinger. The McMahons expect to move to Youngstown sometime this month.

SERMONOGRAMS

There are no little sins.

Preach the gospel, do not defend it.

No man can rise to high places on low motives.

True joy is found in giving, not in grabbing.

One who hates suffers more than the one he hates.

There would be less gloom if we gave Christ more room.

There is much pity wasted on self which rightly belongs to some one else.

The person whom we dislike is not the one about whom it is safe to talk.

Prosperity proves to be a means of grace to very few people.

You will make some mishaps this year, but do not repeat the mistakes of last year.

You can hardly make a friend in a year, but you can easily offend one in an hour.

What we really care for in our friends is not their talents or achievements, but their kindly ways and their warm hearts.

"Thou shalt not steal," reputation, happiness, time or credit that belongs to thy neighbor, any more than his material possessions.

No one can read the Bible daily and thoughtfully without gain from the practice. New ideals will be given him, messages will come to him that will uplift his life and ennoble his character.

SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue).

1. What do you think of a teacher who does not attend church services?

The teacher who does not attend the services of the church is by example destroying a large proportion of the good which might be accomplished through her instruction. The purpose of the school is not only to teach the Word of God, but also to train in religion and develop the spiritual life. One of the most necessary elements in the development of the spiritual life is regular church attendance. The teacher who is in earnest in her work will for her own sake and for the value of the example set, be found regularly in the place of worship.

2. What are some of the reasons for removing a teacher from the Sunday school staff?

Inability to teach clearly, inability to discipline, inability to interest class, lacking consecration, failure to prepare lesson, frequent absences, persistent tardiness, immaturity, old age, immorality, indiscretion, heterodox doctrinal views, lack of harmony with the administration, lacking interest in the work, ill health, neglect to perform required duties.

JUVENILE BROTHERHOOD.

"Here, boy, let me have a paper."

"Can't."

"Why not? I heard you crying them loud enough to be heard the distance of half a mile."

"Yes, but that was done in the other block where I could call at the top of my voice."

"What does that matter? Come now, no fooling; I'm in a hurry."

"Can't sell a paper in this block, mister, because it belongs to Limpy. He is just up at the other side. He'll be here in a few minutes. You'll meet him."

"And who is Limpy, and why does he have this block?"

"Because he is a cripple and this is the best block for selling papers; we paper boys have agreed that this should be Limpy's block, and the first chap caught selling papers here should be thrashed."

"Yes, I see, you have a sort of brotherhood among yourselves. I shall be very glad to wait for Limpy."

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

Christ's Triumphal Entry (Luke 19:29-40) for January 4.

1. How did Jesus prove his knowledge of prophecy in this incident?
2. How and why do we observe Palm Sunday?
3. What are some of the ways in which we can prepare a path for Jesus in the world and make him king?
4. What is the place and value of street processions and pageantry?
5. What kind of criticism is proper and useful in the church and what kind is blameworthy and harmful?
6. What is the responsibility of his followers toward the world's recognition of the kingship of Christ?

CLERICUS SAYS: Unless we know Christ to be the Saviour of our souls and the Lamb of God, we shall soon tire of singing hosannas in his train and want a king with more pretensions; but if we have learned who and what he is to us, then let us open our months wide, and not be afraid of letting the world hear our shout of praise.

Lesson Prayer.

Dear Jesus, we would be reminded of thy kingship. We come to thee today as a child comes to his father or his mother. We need thee! Fold us in thine arms, assure us of they forgiving love, and strengthen us for life's duties. In thy conquering name we pray. Amen.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

The Pageant of the Triumphal Entry
Making Christ Our King.
Luke 19:29-40.
International Lesson for January 4.
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

On the morning of Palm Sunday there was a great stir in Bethany and along the roads leading to Jerusalem. It was understood that Jesus was to enter the city that day. The people were gathering in crowds and seemed bent on signalizing his entrance with a great popular pageant. Jesus for the first time permitted a public recognition and celebration of his rights as Messiah and King. It was the springtime and a mass of fresh colors lay palpitating on the landscape, the air was balmy and fragrant with the breath of spring and over all the scene flashed the splendor of an Oriental sky.

An Eventful Day.

A colt was procured and the disciples, having thrown their robes on it, placed Jesus on it and the procession started. It would not have compared in magnitude with many a procession that attended the triumphal entry of a Roman conqueror or the coronation of a king or even the inauguration of a president, but it meant more for the world. Slowly the line of shouting followers and at the summit Jerusalem broke upon the view. The city sat like a jeweled crown on the brow of Mount Zion. In the foreground rose the marble walls of the temple stainless whiteness, crowned with its glittering gilded roof, a mass of snow and gold; in the background stretched the streets and squares of the city; and over it lay the spell of a thousand years of patriotic and sacred associations. At the first sight of the city Jesus burst into tears. What an unaccountable interruption of the festivities of the hour! Even in the midst of his joys and triumphs Jesus was a man of sorrows acquainted with grief and in the midst of our triumphs and gladdest hours we may have reason enough for tears. The procession passed on into the city and Jesus went up into the temple and cleansed it of its

Runyon Says

The "Big Time" Is Behind Time.
"Punch 'em" Paul Is an Example.
How Jim Barton Rose to Fame.
Then There's Amelita Galli-Curci.
Corbett Didn't Surprise West.

Copyright, 1925, International Feature Service, Inc.

BY DAMON RUNYON

"I read with interest your recent article about fighters and actors who became over-night sensations in New York, or on what you call the 'big time,' after their ability had long been recognized elsewhere. Can you tell me instances other than those you mentioned?"

Perhaps it is a woman.

It is a flattering thought. The writer is always hoping he may have something to say that will interest the ladies.

"Punch 'Em" Paul Berlenbach, the Astoria Ox, is a pugilistic example of what the writer had in mind in the article mentioned by the correspondent.

"Punch 'em" Paul can pack Madison Square Garden, the fistic "big time" house, or any outdoor arena, against almost any opponent, drawing distinguished bankers, and brokers and clubmen in evening attire.

Yet months before Berlenbach appeared in the Garden he was fighting in the pugilistic outskirts of Manhattan Island packing National Guard armories and small clubs with less fashionable customers who were appreciating his ability when those who follow only the performers of the "big time" couldn't pronounce his name.

His followers often wondered why Paul didn't get a chance in the big clubs.

When he finally appeared in Madison Square Garden — packing the house—the "big time" patrons went away babbling, "where has this fellow been anyway?"

He brought no more ability to the Garden on that first appearance than his admirers knew he possessed. He did not surprise them. Yet he was a sensation, a new discovery, to the "big time."

Jim Barton was known for years to thousands of patrons of burlesque. He drew well as he toured the burlesque wheel. But his name meant nothing to the producers and patrons of the big Broadway shows.

One night Barton went to the Lexington avenue Opera house to appear at a benefit for the Actors Equity. Many prominent professionals were present, some of the best known names in the show business were on the bill.

The homely dancer and "comic" from burlesque shuffled on the stage, obscure, unknown. A few of the profession who happened to know him applauded politely. A few minutes later, Jim Barton was the talk of the town.

Everybody asked, "where has this man been?" Producers waited at the stage door to suggest terms to him.

Barton was getting about $125 per week at the time. Today he is one of theh ighest salaried men in the profession.

To that same Lexington avenue Opera House, which is out of the way of the Broadway theatrical traffic, went one night a woman singer.

She had been trying to get booking in vaudeville. A few who heard her sing said she had a nice voice. Unfortunately for her their opinion had no weight with those who could give her a job.

At the Lexington avenue Opera House she sang the Shadow Song in "Dinorah." The next day men and women were raving about her. Her name was quite well known. It is Amelita Galli-Curci. Put on one of her records—you undoubtedly have one—and listen to her marvelous voice.

She had been in stock companies, her talent was undobtedly appreciated by many, who perhaps wondered why she wasn't better known.

She finally appeared in a play called "Conscience." The following morning she was famous. People were saying, "where has this woman been?"

Perhaps those who saw her outside New York are marveling at the sudden praise of her acting, and saying, "why, of course she can act—"WE KNEW THAT!"

Will Rodgers, the ex-cowboy, was around for some years with his lariat, his chewing gum, his horse—yes, he had a horse—getting about $250 per week in vaudeville.

You may have seen him in his vaudeville days in your home town. If you did you undoubtedly are among those who liked his work.

Florenz Ziegfeld, the serious looking man who stages those wonderful shows, with the beautiful women, looked Harry Fitzgerald, a booking agent, askance, when Fitzgerald suggested that Ziegfeld put Rogers on the roof of the New Amsterdam, in the midnight show.

That was the last word in entertainment, in magnificence, at the time. The swells of the town packed around the tables to see the beautiful girls in their beautiful gowns. But Ziegfeld, a born showman, who would have made a great pugilistic promoter, saw the possibilities of Rogers act.

So Rogers appeared on the roof, among the beautiful girls in their gorgeous gowns a figure almost startling by contrast. He appeared before audiences that had never seen him before, and people looked at each other and said, "why he's good—where has he been all this time?"

Rogers is still with Ziegfeld. He is said to get a salary of $3,500 per week. He makes as much more in the movies, and in writing.

He is today one of the "big names" of the show business, a great humorist and with it a fine gentleman.

Twenty-three years ago there came East from the city of Denver, Colorado, a young fellow called Young Corbett.

The "ringworms" of the West knew he could fight. He had whipped Joe Bernstein, Kid Broad, Eddie Santry, Oscar Gardner and George Dixon, all good men.

But the East, especially New York City hadn't seen these performances—they hadn't taken place on Manhattan. Thus New York chose to ignore the record. To it this Yuong Corbett was wholly unknown.

He was pitted against the pugilistic pride of the big town, the great Terry McGovern. You could have any price you asked on Young Corbett. He knocked out McGovern in two rounds.

The East was stunned.

Men stared at each other, and said, "well what do you think of that?"

Out in Denver, and other cities of the west that had seen Corbett, they were surprised at the surprise of the East.

They thought it funny the East didn't know Corbett could fight, that it marveled over something that had been quite obvious to them. But it took another knockout of McGovern by Corbett to make the East agree with the West.

Holdout Rivals.

The Jolly holdout days are come,
The saddest of the year.
When players will mail their contracts back.
And spend their days in fear—
THAT THEY WON'T GET A NEW ONE.

ROCKIES REGION HAS PRETENDER TO GREB'S TITLE

Ring's Latest "Tiger" Has Built Impressive Record.

DENVER, Colo.—A serious contender for the world's middleweight boxing crown, which now adorns the cranium of Harry Greb, is looming in fistic circles of the Inter-Mountain region. He is Jack ("Tiger") Payne, rated the greatest negro fighter who has displayed his leather-pushing ring-craft in Colorado rings since the great Joe Gans invaded the Rockies some twenty years ago.

Payne is nineteen years of age. He was born in Denver, but moved to Chicago, where he learned he could fight and take 'em anywhere from the belt to the eyebrows by emerging with flying colors in rough-and-tumble alley battles. His rise up the pugilistic ladder during the past six months has been rapid. Fighting his way from obscurity into boxing prominence every night, was the achievement of Payne, ever was presented here.

The "Tiger" is being coached by Johnny Corbett, one of America's foremost ring mentors, who turned out Young Corbett (William Rothwell) and Abe Attell, formerly world's featherweight champions. Jack's capable teacher is immensely impressed by his pupil and believes Rayne will follow in the footsteps of Young Corbett by being the second Denver boxer to mount a fistic throne.

Payne has engaged in forty ring battles and has held his own against the field, winning thirty-two bouts by knockout. Just recently he defeated Jimmy Moore, of Cincinnati; "Speedball" Hayden, of Casper; Eddie St. Clair, of Salt Lake; Eddie Johnson, of Pubelo, and Mose Ferguson, light-heavyweight champion of Colorado.

W. A. Sargent, Denver sportsman, is managing the "Tiger" and is formulating plans to bring "Tiger" Flowers here for a match with Payne.

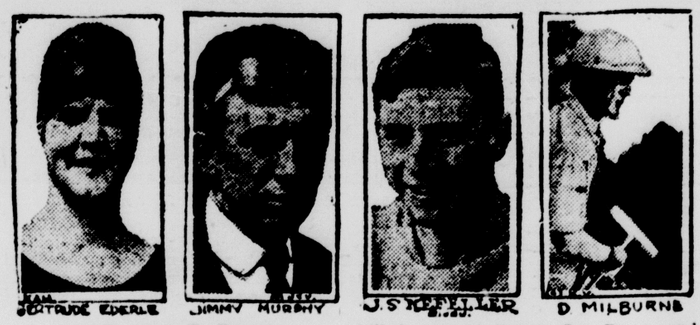
OHIO SPORTSMEN PROTEST ATTACK ON REFUGE BILL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 3.—Ohio sportsmen and bird lovers were appealed to today by officials of the league of Ohio Sportsmen to mail to their congressmen requests for immediate passage of the game refuge bill now pending in congress. The league officials called attention to what they termed "A pernicious attack on the bill by a publicity agent of the Dupont Powder company, Wilmington, Del."

"Just why the Dupont Powder company permits its employe to assail a measure to conserve wild life which has been endorsed by game commissioners, bird lovers, foresters, grangers and sportsmen throughtout the nation is a mystery to us," league officials said.

The game refuge bill is endorsed and sppported by the American Game Protective association; the Isaak Walton league; National Exchange clubs; the League of Ohio Sportsmen; and similar organizations in every state, it was declared. A protest from the league of Ohio Sportsman against the attack on the bill, to be sent to the president of the Dupont company, was being planned today.

"LITTLE FELLOWS" HAD THEIR INNINGS



By Norman E. Brown.

The so-called minor branches of sport went through the greatest year they have ever enjoyed. The brilliant performances of the leading lights in some of those branches carried their fields into the realms of major sports.

Polo, by virtue of the international matches at Meadowbrook, entered the role of major sports. Thanks to the playing of Capt. Devereaux Milburn and his mates America retained the trophy by defeating Great Britain in two straight matches.

The record breaking performances of Gertrude Ederle and Johnny Weismuller in the water drew large slices of the limelight to them and the swimming game. Weismuller won two Olympic championships. Miss Ederle's best effort was a new record of 2:41 1-5 for the 220-yard free-style swim.

Auto racing suffered the most disastrous season in its history. Jimmy Murphy, leader in the race for the point championship of the year, was but one of several famous drivers killed. Dario Resta, Joe Boyer and Earl Wilson were also victims of the speedways.

Pop Geers' death was the tragic event of the light harness racing season.

Wrestling was perhaps the one sport that failed to draw much interest during the year. Ed "Strangler" Lewis retained the professional heavyweight title. The interest in this sport, however, continues to decline.

From Holland came one of the year's stars in the bicycle game. Peter Moeskops won the world's bike title in Paris for the fourth consecutive year. Then he came to the United States and won 16 out of 19 match races against leading American riders.

Epinard's efforts to turn back American's turf stars in a series of three international races were unsuccessful but won for the horse and his owner, Pierre Wertheimer, much popularity and friendship.

GRAND PRIX TO BE RUN OVER NEW TRACK IN MADRID

MADRID, Jan. 3.—It has been decided that the 1926 Automobile Grand Prix will takke place in Spain, and the Spanish Automobile club is casting around for a suitable speedway on which to hold the race.

Construction of a magnificent new speedway near Madrid, the largest in the world, practically has been decided upon. A company has been formed for the purpose, with a capital of four million pesetas, and the ground necessary is said to have been purchased at Cantillejas, near the Madrid-Allicante road.

The organizers are making arrangements to race a part of the 1926 Grand Prix on the new speedway, and roads in the vicinity will be thoroughly renovated so as to join up with other roads for the race, thus forming a circuit similar to that at Monza, near Milan.

It is possible that the speedway will be finished within a year.

Walt Johnson Gives Lesson in Humility

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3—Walter Johnson, star that he is, has a far different make-up from that of Babe Ruth.

Ruth demanded and received as high as $2,500 a game for some of the games in which he participated on the Coast. For the three-game series in San Francisco, Ruth was paid the lump sum of $6,500.

When the Oakland ball players decided they wanted to stage an exhibition before the lid went on, they wired Johnson, asking his best terms.

"I'll not only come, but I'll take a chance with the other players. Give me a cut along with the boys."

That was the message from Johnson.

He came, and the rainy weather knocked a prospective crowd for a row of goals. There wasn't much "sugar" for the ball players to divide. Yet Johnson, who is no prima donna, went through with his agreement and pitched five innings.

ERIE SWIMMERS SET NEW RECORD

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 3—Erie Y. M. C. A. relay swimming team last night established a new world's record for 160 yards when they defeated the Brooklyn Central Y team in 1:15 4-5. The old mark was held by Yale university and was 1:16 2-3; O'Dea, Cross, Smith and Wright composed the Erie team.

Last Night's Fights

At New York.—St. Louis "Kid" Kaplan, of Meriden, Conn., wins featherweight championship by victory over Danny Gramer, Philadelphia, in ninth round. Babe Herman, California featherweight, defeated Billy Defore, St. Paul, 8 rounds. Jack Hauser won decision over Frankie Brown, six rounds.

FIGHT FANS SET FOR HOT BATTLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Fight fans were looking forward today to one of the toughest battles of the season, when Tiger Flowers, colored light heavyweight from Atlanta, will face Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., in a 12-round contest on January 16 at Madison Square Garden. Both men are hard hitters.

ENGLISH TENNIS CHAMPS TO SAIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—J. C. F. Simpson and R. C. O. Williams, doubles champions of England for 1922 and 1923, are expected to come to America to play in the American national championships, tennis officials said today. They will compete probably in both doubles and singles.

COLLEGE CAGERS OPEN SCHEDULE

NEW YORK, June 3.—The eastern inter-collegiate basketball season opens tonight with Pennsylvania clashing with Yale at Philadelphia.

YALE PUCK TEAM WINS CLOSE TILT

To Defend Coast Title.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—Miss Marion Hollins, former national woman golf champion, will not be a member of the American team that will compete in the British championship next Spring. She says that she plans to leave for California this month to defend her title in the annual Pebole Beach tournament.

FASANO TAKES ON TREMAINE

Headline Zill's Youngstown Card Monday Night.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 3—Matchmaker Al. Zill intends to open the new year right, fistically, and with this in view, will send up Frankie Fasano, of New York, and Carl Tremaine, of Cleveland, in the main scrap of the card he has arranged for Monday night in the Rayen-Wood auditorium.

Tremaine and Fasano will meet in a 12-rounder. The Clevelander needs little introduction to fight fans of the district, and although Fasano is a newcomer to the state his record has spoken a lot for him in advance.

The little Italian lad sprang into prominence by gaining a three-round verdict over Jack Sharkey and then coming back with a decision over Irish Johnny Curtin. He accomplished the latter job thoroughly, leaving the New Jersey youth in such bad shape that he was unable to go through with his scheduled match here with Rosey Stoy.

The scrap between Tremaine and Fasano may have an important bearing on a decision as to the logical contender to meet Eddie "Cannonball" Martin for the title.

1924 PROVED BIG YEAR FOR SPORT THRILLS ANYWAY

The year 1925 may produce some brilliant sport. It is doubtful, however, if it will produce a greater number of real heart-stopping moments than its predecessor.

There was, for instance, that moment when Walter Johnson, pitching with his back to the wall, faced Long George Kelly of the Giants with two down in the twelfth and final inning of the last world's series game. The elongated first baseman, a wicked hitter and a shrewd batter, stood between Johnson and victory and the fame and glory that was wrapped up to go with it. Johnson struck him out.

And in golf—

When Walter Hagen laid his ball seven feet away from the cup on the last green in the British open championship play and then took his stance for the putt that meant the world title for the second time in three years or only a chance to play off a tie. He sunk the putt.

In the women's ranks—

Mary Browne, repeating her sensational playing of 1923, fought her way through the semi-final match of the national women's tourney with Glenna Collett, young and powerful, as her opponent. They came to the last hole with Miss Browne down one. She drove her ball into the rough. The match seemed lost. Calmly Miss Browne selected a brassie and made one of the prettiest shots of the tournament. She squared the match and won it on the nineteenth green.

Other tense moments might be cited.

How about the moment when Yale went into the third period of its game with Harvard apparently beaten and then uncorked a driving attack that wiped out those goals of Gehrke's and placed the Bulldog on top?

Tennis fans who say the semi-final match in the national tennis tourney between Vincent Richards and Big Bill Tilden never hope to see more tennis crowded into a few moments than they saw when Richards forced the king of them all to five sets before going down to a glorious defeat.

Rises to Heights By Beating Danny Kramer Into Pulp

End Comes in Ninth Round When Philly Boy's Seconds Toss in Blood-smeared Towel; Fight Goes Down in Records as One of Most Vicious of all Time.

By Ford Frick.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—"Swish! Bang! Biff! Smash!"

"Whoop! Whoop! Hooray!"

For Louis "Kid" Kaplan last night drove himself into a featherweight championship with vicious rights and lefts that wounded and beat off the defenseless body of Danny Kramer like rising breakers against storm-swept rocks.

For eight rounds Kaplan swung, swung and swung. For eight rounds Kramer stood up to the punishment, his face battered and bleeding, his right eye cut to a pulp, his nose and ears spurting blood.

Each round it seemed that it must end; each round the Philadelphian staggered and wobbled and tottered like an oak before the axe of a master woodsman. But still he kept his feet, fighting blindly with the instinct of a bulldog that knows no defeat but oblivion.

The fans, standing on their chairs like wolves howling for a kill, sickened at the massacre.

"Stop it! Stop it!" they cried.

But still they fought on and still Kaplan's fists flew like driving pistons carrying him on to a championship.

Then in the ninth the end came.

Out of Kramer's corner a towel came hurtling—a towel stained and reddened with the blood of the battler who stood in mid-ring, too dazed to know what had happened; too dazed to realize that a generous second had brought merciful surcease from punishment that seemed endless.

With blood spurting from his nose, his face a gory smear, his eye closed, Kramer was led back to his corner. He staggered and tottered, but he tried to push his seconds away. He wanted to fight—wanted to keep going; wanted to carry on.

But he couldn't. Kaplan carried too many guns.

And so it ended—a fight that will go down into boxing history as one of the most vicious of all time.

And so it was that Meriden, Conn., made the old garden ring with its cheering as it welcomed its own featherweight champion, a champion who bore his honors proudly above his bruised nose and cut features; a champion whose first act was to step over and shake the hand of his broken opponent.

It was a fight without science, a fight filled with sheer slugging. Kramer drove for the body; Kaplan shot for the head and Kaplan landed three to Kramer's nose. The result was inevitable.

Some nine thousand fans saw the bouts—saw them with an enthusiasm that promised to sweep the building from its foundations.

No other tire is made in this way!

MILLER Tires and Tubes are made from the same rubber that goes into Miller's world standard surgical supplies and rubber sundries. In the initial preparation, the workmen do not know whether they are mixing rubber for tires or for the most delicate rubber goods on earth. They only know that every ounce of rubber must be as nearly perfect as man can make it!

That's why you seldom see a Miller Geared-to-the-Road Cord with a worn-out tread. The live, tough surgeon's grade rubber resists the wear of travel and gives you positive traction throughout the long life of Miller Cords. Buy one today, and notice that the tread will still be good even after any other tire you have is worn out!

A Hint for Beginners

The cross-word puzzle diagram is merely a means of concealing words which are synonymous to those listed and which will interlock perfectly and so read equally well crosswise of downwards. Always look for the number of the synonym on the diagram. If horizontal, you must find a word to fit between that number and the first shaded stop to the right; if vertical, you must fit your word between the number and the first shaded step below.

AL G. FIELD MINSTRELS WILL APPEAR AT CERAMIC THEATRE TUESDAY NIGHT

Not since the days of the old river boats has there been seen a more typical old-time minstrel show than the 38th annual edition of the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which Manager Edward Conrad will present at the Ceramic theatre, Tuesday, January 6. All the atmosphere and characteristics of the good old time minstrelsy are present. To hear Jack Richards sing "Mother, O My Mother" in his clear, and powerful tenor voice, alone is worth the price of admission. And there is Billy Church, another bell-like tenor, who fairly thrills you with "The Story of the Rosary." Nick Hufford, as a comedian, has few equals on the minstrel stage. He is a loose page from the book of fun, and is ably assisted by Harry Frankel, the boy from old Kentucky, Harry Shunk, Jack Kenned and Johnny Healy.

No minstrel show is complete without its dancing, and Billy and Leo Doran possess such nimble feet that they almost seem to be automatic. There is song, harmony, melody, comedy and dancing in this year's show. And above all, there is atmosphere. There is a pleasure yacht, sailing the seas, with everyone on board keeping time to the waves. There is Holland, the land of windmills and wooden shoes; and Spain, where romance runs high, and song and dance are the life.

This year's production is more elaborate than any previous one. The costumes are more gorgeous and unique in design. The songs are more appealing, the comedy more clever and the dancing more intricate. And still, through it all, runs the backbone of the old-time art of minstrelsy—the charm of the old customs and the appeal of the old melodies.

Critics in the cities where it has played, have been enthusiastic in their praise of this newest production of the Field organization. The seat sale opened today.

Pupils Take Machine Belonging to Teacher; Enjoy Great Thrill

WICHITA, Kan. — Tired of school life and desiring a "fling and a thrill," two boys and two girls, all about 14 years old and members of a grade school here, stole an automobile belonging to their teacher and started out for Kansas City, according to a story told police by one of the boys, who "got scared" and jumped out of the car after it had gone a few miles.

Warren Speer, who "got scared" and jumped, returned to school and told his teacher of the affair. He said they had planned to drive to Kansas City. The other children are Dorothea Leonhart, 14; Hazel Hull, 14, and Lewis Homan, 15.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE ANSWER

Yesterday's Puzzle Answered.

unholy traffic. In the evening the crowds dispersed, and Jesus quietly returned to Bethany. Nothing seems to have been accomplished. Never will Jesus be made king by any pagentry and pomp. Yet the triumphal entry had deep and rich significance.

The Procession.

The disciples cast their garments down and scattered greenery on the dusty roadway and thus transformed it into a path of beauty. Disciples must still prepare the way for Jesus. He cannot go through the world in a triumphal march unless we go with him before him and make a path for him. Human agencies may open the way along which the Spirit of Christ gets into human hearts and also into the world. This may be a costly road to build and we must put it into our most precious things. And the path should be one of beauty. The highway along which Jesus travels should not seem to be a hard and dusty road, but should be so carpeted and festooned that it will be a way of pleasantness and a path of peace. The people should as they passed along, and in answer to the question, "Who is this?" they answered, "This is the prophet, Jesus, from Nazareth of Galilee." It took some courage to say that up in Jerusalem, and we still need boldness and bravery in proclaiming Jesus Christ the rightful King of this world. This spirit of feverency is evaporating out of our religious life. We are growing so reserved and formal that we are afraid to speak out in our religious meetings. Even the Methodists are ceasing to shout. We need more freedom and fervency and fire in our religious life and on proper occasions should not think it unseemly to let our emotions loose.

Desecration in the Temple.

A shocking scene met the view of Jesus in the temple. Business had invaded its holy precincts with noisy hawking and bargaining. Jesus ordered the traders out, and they fled before the majesty of his person and the starry light in his eyes. The house of worship should be kept clear and clean of all unfitting and desecrating uses. More difficult and necessary is it that we should keep out wrong thoughts and motives as we worship in it. If while listening to the prophet up in the pulpit we are only calculating profits down in the pew, or if we are cherishing thoughts of pride and vanity, we are indeed desecrating the house of God as truly as though we were noisily transacting in it the business of the office and market.

Criticism.

Criticism was not wanting on this occasion. When was there ever a day of an event so successful and good that somebody did not find fault? We could infallibly name the critics on this occasion without seeing the record. "Some of the Pharisees!" Bigoted and blind to the last; never knowing the day of their opportunity; zealous for the temple of the Lord and rejecting the Lord of the temple! The enthusiasm was so contagious that the very children were crying out their Hosannas, and it was the children, too, that criticism seized upon and objected to. Even yet young people cannot show manual interest and earnestness and enthusiasm in the church without exciting the displeasure of some critics. The great day ended and nothing came of it. Jesus was not yet king. And never will he be king by such means. He, however, experienced no disappointment, for he knew that the kingdom of God cometh not with observation.

SICK 3 YEARS WITHOUT RELIEF

Finally Found Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbia, S. C.—"Your medicine has done me so much good that I feel like I owe my life to it. For three years I was sick and was treated by physicians, but they didn't seem to help me any. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got strong enough to do my housework, where before I was hardly able to be up. I have also taken the Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and it has left me in good health. I recommend it as the best medicine for women in the Change of Life and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. S. A. Holley, R. F. D. No. 4, Columbia, South Carolina.

Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness, painful times and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring relief? Take it when annoying symptoms first appear and avoid years of suffering.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 200,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use.

Husband Deserted Her 16 Times; She Brings Action for Divorce

WASHINGTON — Her husband abandoned her and their children on sixteen distinct occasions, alleges Mrs. Pearl E. O'Brien, who filed suit in the District Court against Edmund J. O'Brien for a limited divorce and alimony.

Plaintiff also alleges non-support and cruelty and declares that on one occasion defendant beat and choked her." They were married at Alexandria, Va., July 20, 1918, and have three children, whose custody is requested by the plaintiff.

Avoid Winter Troubles

Dealers in GARGOYLE
Mobiloil
Make the chart your guide

Cold weather must be specifically reckoned with—particularly in regard to lubrication.

Mobiloil Artic

is the ideal oil for cold weather driving.

Correctly lubricated, the engine turns almost as freely as in warm weather. With judicious use of the choke and a slightly richer mixture, your car will give you the same reliable service in winter as in summer. And with the lightest possible burden to the battery.

For Mobiloil Artic flows freely in the coldest weather. The moment you press on the starter the oil plashes up and begins to feed to every fractional surface.

Free Crank Case Service

One of the many services we render is the drawing out of old oil, flushing the crank case and refilling same with correct grade of Mobiloil.

BAN NEWSPAPERS

PISA, Italy, Jan. 3.—Italy's internal dissension flared higher again today with an outbreak of Fascisti here. The black shirts raided the Masonic lodge, then attacked the Messagero Toscano printing plant, devastating it and burning the supply of print paper.

Several prominent politicians were manhandled by the mob, and their homes ransacked.

Tense Situation.

ROME, Jan. 3.—"Facism does not bow to parliamentary manipulation. It resolves to prevent at any price the prevailing reverses which threaten it."

This defiant clause stood out in the Fascist manifesto issued as the chamber of deputies reassembled today. The press suppression placed in effect by the administration probably will be debated in the chamber."

Premier Mussolini is expected to come to the defense of the Facisti today when he addresses the reconvened chamber of deputies on the internal situation in Italy.

Censorship on News.

It is possible that permission will be requested in the chamber for the prosecution of several Facist deputies, who are charged with irregularities in furthering the Black Shirts' cause.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—There were evidences today that the Fascist administration has set up a censorship on outgoing news, concurrently with the campaign of suppression of newspapers with anti-Fascist tendencies.

In addition to the evangelist, the party consists of his son, William B. Lockhart, better known as "Billy," who will direct the young people's work; J. Frank Harbison, song evangelist, and Mrs. J. Frank Harbison, pianist and children's worker, also of Des Moines.

Evangelist Lockhart has just concluded one of his most successful years in evangelistic work. In his meetings in 1924 the additions numbered less than 230. In some cases they reached 450.

The revival campaign will continue for an indefinite period, services to be held every evening, including Sunday. An afternoon meeting for men and boys only will be held Sunday, January 11, when Evangelist Lockhart will speak on the subject, "Men's Sins."

Evangelist Wm. J. Lockhart.

Sunday—"Weighed in the Balances."

Monday—"The Foundation of My Personal Faith." This will be a union service for all churches of the city.

Tuesday — "The Backslider Up Against It."

FASCISTI MOB ATTACKS PISA LODGE, WRECKS PRINTING SHOP

BAN NEWSPAPERS

PISA, Italy, Jan. 3.—Italy's internal dissension flared higher again today with an outbreak of Fascisti here. The black shirts raided the Masonic lodge, then attacked the Messagero Toscano printing plant, devastating it and burning the supply of print paper.

Several prominent politicians were manhandled by the mob, and their homes ransacked.

Tense Situation.

ROME, Jan. 3.—"Facism does not bow to parliamentary manipulation. It resolves to prevent at any price the prevailing reverses which threaten it."

This defiant clause stood out in the Fascist manifesto issued as the chamber of deputies reassembled today. A tense situation has developed as the result of internal conflicts between fascists and republican and radical elements. The press suppression placed in effect by the administration probably will be debated in the chamber."

Premier Mussolini is expected to come to the defense of the Facisti today when he addresses the reconvened chamber of deputies on the internal situation in Italy.

Censorship on News.

It is possible that permission will be requested in the chamber for the prosecution of several Facist deputies, who are charged with irregularities in furthering the Black Shirts' cause.

The electoral bill also is expected to be presented.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—There were evidences today that the Fascist administration has set up a censorship on outgoing news, concurrently with the campaign of suppression of newspapers with anti-Fascist tendencies.

LONDON TELLS FRANCE TO PAY

Britain Demands Sum Paris Intends to Send to U. S.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Great Britain will stand firm in its policy that France, in liquidating its war debts, shall pay to England sums equal to those France pay to the United States.

This viewpoint has been "informally communicated" to the United States government, the British foreign office announced today. "The attitude of Britain has not been communicated to France or Italy, it was said.

While Great Britain will not demand that France shall consider England a favored nation, it would not refuse to accept such recognition, it was pointed out.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Administration officials today evisioned a long and tedious period of negotiations over the funding of the $4,000,000,000 French war debt.

If the Clementel note, now reported en route to Washington, bears out the summaries of it that have been cabled in press dispatches from Paris, it is considered a foregone conclusion here that the terms proposed by France will prove wholly unacceptable to the United States.

These terms are understood to be:

1—A moratorium of ten years:

2—An interest rate of one half of one per cent.

3—Payments to be made over a period of 90 years.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—There are certain phases of the 10-year moratorium and 80 year payment plan suggested by Finance Minister Clementel that are not acceptable to the United States government.

This was evident in governmental circles today when it was said that United States Ambassador Herrick would not tranmit Clementel's unofficial memorandum to Washington until Clementel had agreed to a revision.

Herrick himself was not inclined to discuss the changes.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Stocks of the radio and oil companies led the stock market into another violent rally in prices in the short session today. Radio was the magic word which fired the speculative imagination of stock traders in every part of the country and orders poured in for stocks of companies directly or remotely connected with the new industry. The spurt in oil stocks which opened auspiciously yesterday was continued in full force with Standard Oils in the listed market and on the curb in the lead, and prominent independent oils in active trading, advancing a fraction to two points.

The improvement in the money situation was reflected in the 3½ per cent increase in the cash reserves of the New York Federal Reserve bank; mercantile agencies reported conditions favorable for the continuation of business expansion and business leaders poured forth a volume of optimistic predictions and traders from all over the country rushed in to buy stocks.

With radio corporation absorbing a heavy volume of profit taking, attention was concentrated on stocks of other companies manufacturing radio apparatus of any kind. Westinghouse continued its spectacular course and rose eight points to 83 in the first hour. Electric Storage Battery gained five points at 70¼; Bosch Magneto was up at 53½. Stromberg and Hayes Wheel led the market in the Motor Accessories and Studebaker in the Motor stocks.

United States Steel sold at 1.23¼ today thus smashing all of its price record since 1917. American Can came to life and marched up 7 points to record high at 1.68.

Sentiment with respect to the Oil Industry and the oil stocks has undergone a complete change in the last few days. The enormous stocks of Crude oil in storage, instead of being considered a menace to the industry, are held to be necessary to meet the enormous requirements of consumption this year.

Southern Railway sold above 80 for the first time in its history at the head of the Railroad shares which were uniformly strong though not as active as the industrials.

cuing boats—the revenue cutter Kickapoo and the tugs Mars and Kaleen from the Queen Anne pier.

According to an officer of the Mohawk the fire was discovered by Miss Amelia Buckley, of New York, a passenger at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Members of the crew declared the fire was discovered earlier. Miss Buckley was in her room when she detected smoke and coming out into the corridor she said she noted heavy clouds of smoke which filled the entire ship from hold to upper deck.

Prayers Said In Social Hall.

Stories told by passengers and members of the Mohawk's crew agree that Thursday night was one of danger, dread and excitement. Prayers were said in the crowded social hall of the doomed vessel while smoke filled the place.

As the fire came nearer the intense heat, declared one of the ship's officers, drove some of the passenger's out into the storm on open deck. All wore life preservers. Several women fainted. Some of the men demanded from the ship's officers that something be done immediately to save them from death.

Captain Staple's determination to save his ship added to the passenger's terror it is said. He tried to get his ship to Philadelphia and only gave up the attempt when the officers of the coast guard cutter Kickapoo agreed with him that the destruction of the Mohawk was inevitable, declared a member of the cutter's crew.

Passengers Indignant.

It was that battle to save the ship, it is said, that brought the storm of indignation from the passengers after they were landed.

One passenger, Dr. D. Villamena, of 77 East 283rd street, New York, declared that the passengers were "placed in deadly peril of our lives and we lost all our baggage because the ship was not landed and aid not accepted when the fire was discovered."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—President Coolidge today approved the compromise postal rate bill drafted by the joint postal committee of congress.

His approval of the lower rates adopted after newspaper publishers had protested against the proposed increases was voiced to Senator Moses, Republican, of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee of the special sub-committee which held hearings on the postal bill.

Although the rate increases agreed upon by administration leaders are not as high as those recommended by Postmaster General New, with White House approval, the president told Moses that he believed the new bill was scientifically drawn, and that it would operate to offset the $68,000,000 increase in the salaries of postal employes.

Three Persons Injured.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3—Nine persons, eight of them children, met death in two fires in North Montreal early today.

The fire broke out while families still were asleep and firemen who found the bodies, could not determine whether the children had been suffocated or died while trying to escape.

A boy and two girls were victims in one fire. A woman and five children died in the second fire. Three persons were removed to hospitals for treatment for burns and injuries, and a score of persons had narrow escapes from death.

Miss Margaret Hill, who roomed on the third floor, leaped one story to the room of an adjoining building and then jumped two stories into a snow drift. She was only slightly injured.

Mrs. Almeda Colby, also a third floor roomer, who tried to escape in the same way, was caught by a fireman as she neared the snow.

YOUR HEALTH

Keep Your Nails Trimmed and Clean to Keep Healthy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

A PHYSICAL defect of any kind is unpleasant to look at and very hard to bear

There are many defects which are noticeable only to the person afflicted. Of these, defects of the nails are perhaps the most common

Some of these defects are simple and easily corrected. Others are more serious in that it is almost impossible to correct these troubles, or even to improve them. It is fortunate indeed that the majority of the nail defects are of the simple types

Ingrowing nails of the fingers and toes are very common. We all know that the most common cases of ingrown nails are due to poorly-fitting shoes. Ingrown finger-nails are found among women workers whose hands are exposed to irritating substances such as washing and scrubbing

In the majority of these cases, it is found that habitual biting of the nails aggravates the trouble. The [illegible] cuticle grows tightly to the edge of the nail.

"Hang-nails," as they are commonly called, are painful. They come from inattention to the care of the nails.

The cuticle grows tight to the nail at the corners and then it tears away leaving the rough and broken pieces. These tear deeper and deeper getting into the flesh and possibly becoming infected.

You can see why it is important to give special attention to the care of your nails. The cuticle should be kept pushed back from the nails, the corners carefully cut and any rough edges cut off.

Many people have white spots on the nails. Bruises from manicure instruments, husking corn jams and other injuries cause these. There is little that can be done to overcome this trouble because the nail-bed itself is injured

Ringworms eczema of the fingers bacterial infections, all travel rapidly to the base of the nail causing infection there.

Eczema is the most common cause of nail infections. As the eczematous condition of the fingers spreads, it attacks this thin nail and in turn the nail-bed. As soon as this happens the nail becomes loosened at the base there is pus and serous discharge.

The result is that this nail has to be removed to allow the infection to clear up and the new nail to come in smooth and straight. Splinters, rusty nails and other foreign bodies under the nails cause serious trouble in many instances.

Most persons give little or no thought to the nails. They seem to believe the nails are of little importance. This is an erroneous impression. Great care should be taken of the hands and nails.

Unclean hands and unclean nails carry many germs that in turn carry disease. If for no other reason than this, the nails should be given careful attention.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Stocks of the radio and oil companies led the stock market into another violent rally in prices in the short session today. Radio was the magic word which fired the speculative imagination of stock traders in every part of the country and orders poured in for stocks of companies directly or remotely connected with the new industry. The spurt in oil stocks which opened auspiciously yesterday was continued in full force with Standard Oils in the listed market and on the curb in the lead, and prominent independent oils in active trading, advancing a fraction to two points.

The improvement in the money situation was reflected in the 3½ per cent increase in the cash reserves of the New York Federal Reserve bank; mercantile agencies reported conditions favorable for the continuation of business expansion and business leaders poured forth a volume of optimistic predictions and traders from all over the country rushed in to buy stocks.

With radio corporation absorbing a heavy volume of profit taking, attention was concentrated on stocks of other companies manufacturing radio apparatus of any kind. Westinghouse continued its spectacular course and rose eight points to 83 in the first hour. Electric Storage Battery gained five points at 70¼; Bosch Magneto was up at 53½. Stromberg and Hayes Wheel led the market in the Motor Accessories and Studebaker in the Motor stocks.

United States Steel sold at 1.23¼ today thus smashing all of its price record since 1917. American Can came to life and marched up 7 points to record high at 1.68.

Sentiment with respect to the Oil Industry and the oil stocks has undergone a complete change in the last few days. The enormous stocks of Crude oil in storage, instead of being considered a menace to the industry, are held to be necessary to meet the enormous requirements of consumption this year.

Southern Railway sold above 80 for the first time in its history at the head of the Railroad shares which were uniformly strong though not as active as the industrials.

cuing boats—the revenue cutter Kickapoo and the tugs Mars and Kaleen from the Queen Anne pier.

According to an officer of the Mohawk the fire was discovered by Miss Amelia Buckley, of New York, a passenger at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Members of the crew declared the fire was discovered earlier. Miss Buckley was in her room when she detected smoke and coming out into the corridor she said she noted heavy clouds of smoke which filled the entire ship from hold to upper deck.

Prayers Said In Social Hall.

Stories told by passengers and members of the Mohawk's crew agree that Thursday night was one of danger, dread and excitement. Prayers were said in the crowded social hall of the doomed vessel while smoke filled the place.

As the fire came nearer the intense heat, declared one of the ship's officers, drove some of the passenger's out into the storm on open deck. All wore life preservers. Several women fainted. Some of the men demanded from the ship's officers that something be done immediately to save them from death.

Captain Staple's determination to save his ship added to the passenger's terror it is said. He tried to get his ship to Philadelphia and only gave up the attempt when the officers of the coast guard cutter Kickapoo agreed with him that the destruction of the Mohawk was inevitable, declared a member of the cutter's crew.

Passengers Indignant.

It was that battle to save the ship, it is said, that brought the storm of indignation from the passengers after they were landed.

One passenger, Dr. D. Villamena, of 77 East 283rd street, New York, declared that the passengers were "placed in deadly peril of our lives and we lost all our baggage because the ship was not landed and aid not accepted when the fire was discovered."

President Coolidge O. K.'s Compromise Postal Rate Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—President Coolidge today approved the compromise postal rate bill drafted by the joint postal committee of congress.

His approval of the lower rates adopted after newspaper publishers had protested against the proposed increases was voiced to Senator Moses, Republican, of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee of the special sub-committee which held hearings on the postal bill.

Although the rate increases agreed upon by administration leaders are not as high as those recommended by Postmaster General New, with White House approval, the president told Moses that he believed the new bill was scientifically drawn, and that it would operate to offset the $68,000,000 increase in the salaries of postal employes.

Three Persons Injured.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3—Nine persons, eight of them children, met death in two fires in North Montreal early today.

The fire broke out while families still were asleep and firemen who found the bodies, could not determine whether the children had been suffocated or died while trying to escape.

A boy and two girls were victims in one fire. A woman and five children died in the second fire. Three persons were removed to hospitals for treatment for burns and injuries, and a score of persons had narrow escapes from death.

The body of Dr. Lederer, a student at Cornell Medical school, was found near a window on the third floor.

Miss Margaret Hill, who roomed on the third floor, leaped one story to the room of an adjoining building and then jumped two stories into a snowdrift. She was only slightly injured.

Mrs. Almeda Colby, also a third floor roomer, who tried to escape in the same way, was caught by a fireman as she neared the snow.

YOUR HEALTH

Keep Your Nails Trimmed and Clean to Keep Healthy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

A PHYSICAL defect of any kind is unpleasant to look at and very hard to bear

There are many defects which are noticeable only to the person afflicted. Of these, defects of the nails are perhaps the most common

Some of these defects are simple and easily corrected. Others are more serious in that it is almost impossible to correct these troubles, or even to improve them. It is fortunate indeed that the majority of the nail defects are of the simple types

Ingrowing nails of the fingers and toes are very common. We all know that the most common cases of ingrown nails are due to poorly-fitting shoes. Ingrown finger-nails are found among women workers whose hands are exposed to irritating substances such as washing and scrubbing

In the majority of these cases, it is found that habitual biting of the nails aggravates the trouble. The [illegible] it [illegible] the cuticle grows tightly to the edge of the nail

"Hang-nails," as they are commonly called, are painful. They come from attention to the care of the nails.

The cuticle grows tight to the nail at the corners and then it tears away leaving the rough and broken pieces. These tear deeper and deeper getting into the flesh and possibly becoming infected.

You can see why it is important to give special attention to the care of your nails. The cuticle should be kept pushed back from the nails, the corners carefully cut and any rough edges cut off.

Many people have white spots on the nails. Bruises from manicure instruments, husking corn iems and other injuries cause these. There is little that can be done to overcome this trouble because the nail-bed itself is injured

Ringworms, eczema of the fingers, bacterial infections, all travel rapidly to the base of the nail causing infection there.

Eczema is the most common cause of nail infections. As the eczematous condition of the fingers spreads, it attacks this thin nail and in turn the nail-bed. As soon as this happens the nail becomes loosened at the base, there is pus and serous discharge.

The result is that this nail has to be removed to allow the infection to clear up and the new nail to come in smooth and straight. Splinters, rusty nails and other foreign bodies under the nails cause serious trouble in many instances.

Most persons give little or no thought to the nails. They seem to believe the nails are of little importance. This is an erroneous impression. Great care should be taken of the hands and nails.

Unclean hands and unclean nails carry many germs that in turn carry disease. If for no other reason than this, the nails should be given careful attention.

2.—My tonsils are very large. Would you advise me to have them removed, and if so is it dangerous for one at the age of thirty years to have this operation performed?

Sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble Killed in Accident at Miami.

Although details are still lacking, the report of the accidental death of Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland, sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble of this city and a member of a Florida motoring party headed by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Riverside avenue, was confirmed today by Charles Russell of Riverside avenue, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Gamble.

Mrs. Cramston, it is understood, was almost instantly killed Wednesday in an automobile accident which occurred near Miami, Florida, where the party was visiting.

The only other information contained in the message from Mr. Gamble to his daughter, Mrs. Russell, and her husband, was that no other member of the party had been injured and that they were starting northward immediately with the body of Mrs. Cramston.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell expect to leave here this afternoon for Cleveland, where they will join Mr. and Mrs. Gamble and the latter's sister.

The party which left Wellsville on Dec. 2 for Miami by motor included, besides Mr. and Mrs. Gamble, the latter's three sisters, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Pa.; Mrs. Mildred Bryant and Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland.

They had planned an indefinite stay in the southern state.

Mrs. Cramston was born and reared in Beaver, Pa., the daughter of the late Robert J. and Mildred Connor of Beaver. She spent her early life there. Her husband has been dead for several years.

She is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Lewis H. Trotter of Wellsville, James R. Trotter of Beaver, William H. Trotter of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Wellsville and Mrs. Mildred Bryant of Cleveland.

Arrangements for the funeral services will be completed upon the arrival of the body in Cleveland.

Church Services Tomorrow

Services will be held at the usual hours tomorrow in the various churches of the city. Pastors will deliver the sermons morning and evening. Special musical programs will be given.

Prayer meeting services were held last evening in the home of Joseph Dickey, Jefferson street, under auspices of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Nora Watson Funeral.

Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Nora Watson, 38 years old, wife of A. J. Watson, who died Thursday in the family home, First street. Rev. J. F. Dimit, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church, East Liverpool, officiated. Burial was made in Riverview cemetery, East Liverpool.

Announce Marriage.

Announcement was made here today of the marriage of Miss Mary Snyder, daughter of Mrs. Elmer Snyder, of Toronto, to Raymond Saltsman, son of Mrs. Emma Saltsman, of this city, which was solemnized on Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the First Methodist Protestant church, in Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. McKinney, pastor.

Miss Snyder has been employed as a teacher at the Jefferson County Children's home at Yellow Creek. The bridegroom is employed in the Pennsylvania railroad shops here.

One of grand operas most interesting characters, an Icelander, will come to East Liverpool with the San Carlo Grand Opera company when that novel organization presents "Madame Butterfly" at the Ceramic theatre on Thursday evening, Jan. 15. He is Amund Sjovik (pronounced Shove-ick) and he will sing the leading bass role in the production. This is his first American season, having joined the San Carlo force upon his arrival here from a triumphant tour of the European continent where he sang all of the leading bass roles in the greatest opera houses in the world.

Coincident with the arrival here of the great Finnish athlete, Paave Nurmi, who broke three world's records in one afternoon during the recent Olympic games in Paris, considerable interest has been focused on the Scandinavian races. Now, with a Scandinavian singer coming to the front and creating one of the musical sensations of the present opera season, this interest is increased. Year by year the Nordic races gather in new laurels in the sports or the arts, and it is not far off when they will be listed among the leaders of every field of activity.

When interviewed on this subject some time ago, Mr. Sjovik said that the manner of living of the northern peoples had much to do with their success in the various fields of activity. He says that the climate lends added zest and impetus to their work, and that they do not enjoy the many modern conveniences, which are in themselves softening and which reduce the amount of virility and endurance which is the property of the human being. He explains the power of his voice by his own powerful physique, and says that strenuous exercise and work brought this about.

FLORIDA TRIP ENDS FATALLY

Sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble Killed in Accident at Miami.

Although details are still lacking, the report of the accidental death of Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland, sister of Mrs. E. E. Gamble of this city and a member of a Florida motoring party headed by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Riverside avenue, was confirmed today by Charles Russell of Riverside avenue, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Gamble.

Mrs. Cramston, it is understood, was almost instantly killed Wednesday in an automobile accident which occurred near Miami, Florida, where the party was visiting.

The only other information contained in the message from Mr. Gamble to his daughter, Mrs. Russell, and her husband, was that no other member of the party had been injured and that they were starting northward immediately with the body of Mrs. Cramston.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell expect to leave here this afternoon for Cleveland, where they will join Mr. and Mrs. Gamble and the latter's sister.

The party which left Wellsville on Dec. 2 for Miami by motor included, besides Mr. and Mrs. Gamble, the latter's three sisters, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Pa.; Mrs. Mildred Bryant and Mrs. Jane Cramston of Cleveland.

They had planned an indefinite stay in the southern state.

Mrs. Cramston was born and reared in Beaver, Pa., the daughter of the late Robert J. and Mildred Connor of Beaver. She spent her early life there. Her husband has been dead for several years.

She is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Lewis H. Trotter of Wellsville, James R. Trotter of Beaver, William H. Trotter of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Margaret Piersol of Rochester, Mrs. E. E. Gamble of Wellsville and Mrs. Mildred Bryant of Cleveland.

Arrangements for the funeral services will be completed upon the arrival of the body in Cleveland.

Naval Expenses

Figures don't lie, and it would be hard even for a lying figurer to misrepresent the meaning of certain mathematical facts regarding the American and Japanese naval situation.

What rival powers are spending on their navies ought to be a pretty fair index to the rate at which they are developing their comparative naval strength. Records show that the United States has been spending on her navy, right along, not only a great deal more than Japan, but a great deal more proportionately than is called for by her present ratio of five-to-three in warships.

Only one year in the past five, the 12 months ending last March, has Japan spent half as much as this country. For the present fiscal year she is spending $112,000,000 to our $300,000,000. For the five-year period ending with the year 1924-1925 her total will be $883,000,000 to our $2,107,000,000.

Very likely Japan gets more warships per dollar than we do, but she can hardly get as much for $3 as we get for $7.

Brains and Football

The criticism that football calls for nothing but brawn and is therefore crowding brains out of the colleges and universities is of course an exaggerated statement of a condition that does have some unsatisfactory aspects. Another side is brought to light in the announcement that the captain of the University of Missouri football team has recently been selected a Rhodes scholar.

Many other colleges and universities could point out successful athletes who were also good students, maintaining honestly high standards in their academic work without any favoritism from faculty or fellow-students.

It is possible that there would be still more such happy examples of combined athletic and scholastic attainments if the public attitude toward the intellectually successful undergraduate were improved a little. No school has yet organized a cheering section to inspire and honor the pupil who does sound work in library, laboratory and class room. Very few institutions of higher learning give coveted school letters to the men and women who pass all their courses. Perhaps this is because passing courses is expected of every student while athletic prowess is looked upon as a special service to the school.

The ideal system of education should develop physical health along with mental training and character.

Public Leadership

Bewailing the general lack of political leadership today, William Allen White says, in his Emporia Gazette:

"This world will prosper only when reason removes the evils of the world. Force cannot conquer the evils. And reason will come to men through wise, tolerant, courageous leadership. The best leadership of the world is going not into politics, but into business. Politics in the world today is getting only the left-overs."

It does look so, in many lands, and generally speaking, it is so in America. "Who can say," asks the Emporia sage, "how to attract great men back into politics, where they ruled the earth half a century ago?"

That is the nut for present-day civilization to crack. Government is really more important than it ever was before, or capable of being more important, because it touches such vast interests and affects the welfare of mankind in so many different ways.

Some critics attribute the mediocrity of our present public life to the direct primary and lament the passing of the old-time political convention. Conventions possessing real power did train leaders, whatever their moral defects were. It may prove wise to modify the new system and permit more of the old-fashioned opportunity for organization and the wielding of personal force in politics.

But that will not solve the whole problem. Perhaps it will never be solved until the public attitude toward life changes again, and the ablest men grow weary or dissatisfied with mere business success and turn with new interest to public careers for an outlet of their energies. That will surely come in time, and the time may be nearer than we think.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

TEN MILLION PANCAKES

Berlin celebrated the New Year's arrival by eating 300,000 carp, favorite German fish, and 10,000,000 pfannekuchen. If they were the full sized German pancakes, 10,000,000 were many.

In great American cities, the New Year was welcomed with bootleg whisky that would strip the varnish from the steel wall of a Pullman car.

The New Year is under way. Soon we shall have acquired the habit of writing 1925, instead of 1924, and then the New Year will be an old story.

At the end of 1925 you will easily recognize those unable to take a New Year seriously. They will be about where they were a year before.

FORD'S NEW FACTORY

How big will the Henry Ford concern be when it is full grown? Ford begins 1925 with 6,000,000 more square feet of floor space in his buildings than he had one year ago. That would mean a new factory 100 feet wide, and 60,000 feet long. Quite an expansion.

The bigger he grows, the better, while he continues his efforts to give the people more value for less money. They like to see big fortunes of the Henry Ford type.

If Mr. Ford would devote a few million feet of floor space to garage use at low rates for owners of little cars in big cities, he would help the people and the automobile industry. Car production is a problem solved. The cheap garage is still to come.

A FRANKLIN SIMON PLAN

Merchants all over the country will be interested in a customer's garage plan devised by Franklin Simon, of Fifth avenue, New York.

Mr. Simon has employes to take charge of cars that reach his store, and because of congestion and police rules, cannot be parked nearby. He provides garage space, not far from the store. His chauffeurs take away cars driven by owners, bringing them back to the stone entrance when ordered. And the car is insured, free, against damage while in custody of Franklin Simon employes.

This, the first conspicuous effort to deal with New York's problem of street congestion, is important to other cities.

The president told 3,000 scientists in Washington that society and government no longer fear the results of the scientist's search for truth. There are, however, some representatives of old-fashioned religion that still fear and denounce scientific discoveries.

They shuddered when Galileo announced that a round earth goes around the sun. They said "the earth stands still and the entire universe whirls around it. The Bible says so," and they would have burned Galileo for telling the truth had he not wisely got down on his knees, solemnly abjuring, denying and detesting what he knew to be the truth.

Everybody not steeped in superstition knows that the earth is hundreds of millions of years old. Everybody knows that primitive men, with huge jaws and teeth, more like baboons than humans, lived on this earth at least a quarter of a million years ago. And everyone knows and admits, unless he denies the evidence of his senses, that animals lived here endless millions of years before men came, changing through the years by the slow process of evolution.

Yet there are men, normal and sane in other respects, that deny evolution.

If society and government are reconciled to science, as President Coolidge says, that is good news. The story told in White's "Conflict Between Science and Theology" is an almost incredible record of human brutality, ignorance and superstition.

The national health department takes steps to "prevent the spread of bubonic infection among rats." Why not kill the rats that harbor the fleas that infect human beings with the disease?

Killing a few rates here or there in some "rat week" based on panic, or getting rid of mosquitoes that carry yellow fever in a few localities, does little good.

JAPAN LACKS IRON

Robert Lansing, once secretary of state, forcibly removed by Woodrow Wilson somewhat as a dentist removes a tooth, has discovered that there is no danger whatever of war between the United States and Japan.

Why do you ask?

For the "reason," if you please, that Japan hasn't enough iron to carry on a war.

Mr. Lansing apparently imagines that war still depends on the firing of large round iron bullets.

Did Mr. Lansing notice that one of the Japanese ships, unfortunately on fire at night, was carrying to Japan a very large cargo of nitrates? Nitrates give the kick to explosive bombs. And such bombs, plus poisonous gases that would destroy a whole city, not many tons of large round iron bullets, will decide the next war.

That the British empire means to rule the air, with the world's best air fleet, as it has hitherto ruled the old-fashioned oceans, is perfectly clear and much to the credit of British statesmanship.

The British are building giant dirigibles for air mail service from England to India in peace big enough to carry troops for fighting with a capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

And England goes ahead with this program in spite of the fact that the highly dangerous and deadly hydrogen gas must be used. The United States has practically a monopoly on helium gas, which makes the dirigible safe.

We also assuredly have money to build ships. You are assured also by able financiers that it won't hurt the country to lend one billion a year to private borrowers in Europe. It would not hurt us to spend one-tenth of a billion on flying.

What we lack is the imagination that looks a few years ahead.

The Russian Soviet government has just ordered 100 fighting airplanes from Fokker, the Dutch builder. British engineers will be put in the flying machines, in good condition, as are owned by this glorious, rich nation in the world.

If a "bankrupt" Bolshevik government can afford to order and pay for 100 modern fighting machines, couldn't the United States afford a thousand and train the men to run them?

How long is Uncle Sam to remain like a fat grocerman sitting at his front door, unarmed, waiting for some gunman to fly across the water and hold him up?

A rumor, via Berlin, that Trotzky is in a Moscow prison, takes you back to revolutionary days at the end of the eighteenth century in Paris.

Danton, sent by Robespierre, went to prison and thence to the guillotine.

Robespierre, when his turn came, went to prison and then with broken jaw, but courage intact, took his turn under the guillotine blade.

Marat ruled for a little while from his bath tub, but Charlotte Corday made a call in his bathroom and that was the end of Marat.

LONDON, Jan. 3—One of the biggest and most sensational achievements in the history of radio broadcasting will be seen in Britain's super-airship R-101, shortly to be built.

It is reported that, according to present plans, the airship will have a ballroom fitted with one of the most powerful radio receiving sets in existence, making it possible for the airship's passengers to dance to the music of the world's most famous dance orchestras thousands of miles away. Experts are now working to discover some means of excluding the noise of the engines from the ballroom, and also to find some way of ensuring uninterrupted communication from the land radio stations.

Apart from this unique feature, the airship will have the usual powerful radio sets generally found in super-airships, as well as radio direction finders and other appurtenances.

The English radio concern, the British Broadcasting company, is aiming at giving its million patrons the best programs money can produce.

Besides the usual conglomeration of talks, dancing bands and news bulletins characteristic of the usual broadcasting station, the company is presenting complete operas, musical comedies and tragedies; and such well-known actresses as Lady Tree and the famous veteran tragedienne, Mrs. Kendall, already have spoken into the microphone in connection with these presentations. No expense is spared in the presentations, which are given with full effects—even the sounds of waves beating on the shores, and birds chirping, are achieved by an ingenious combination of stones, water and imitation bird whistling.

Further plans of the British Broadcasting company include the engagement of world-famous concerts artists, musicians and conductors, and the presentation of a series of classical symphony concerts.

Trouble has been encountered in relaying programs from England to Belfast (Ireland) over the submarine cable. Investigation has revealed that, while speech can be transmitted over such a cable fairly well, music becomes distorted and thin.

The popularity of the dance orchestra in England is evidenced by the fact that the Savoy hotel dance bands have had their programs wirelessed to "broadcatchers" for two hours every evening for more than a year.

A recent attempt to discontinue the bands on the part of the British Broadcasting company met with strong opposition from "broadcatchers," and they still form part of every program relayed in London.

It is felt that one of its greatest uses would be in the teaching of languages—a department in which the English are notoriously weak.

One bold suggestion is that the minister of education should make a yearly grant to the British Broadcasting company, which would be expended in the transmission on two mornings a week of a progressive language course, specializing in pronunciation.

It is stated there will be a further World Radio Week early in 1925, when attempts at international communication will be made.

German stations are revising their wave lengths according to reports here. They now use waves of between 350 and 450 metres.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The big salaries made by stage stars are rarely turned to good account. More than half of them eventually strike bankruptcy shoals. George M. Cohan is rich, but most of his money was made in the production end.

Fred Stone's wealth was made largely in lucky real estate ventures. He is often reputed to be the richest American actor, yet some consider it significant that his father recently opened up a barber shop in Great Neck.

Otis Skinner is fairly well to do. James K. Hackett is a millionaire, but his was an inheritance. The actor who has perhaps made the biggest showing on his salary alone is Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator. He has played almost continuously for 20 years.

Eltinge is soon to retire to look after his ranch at Alpine, Cal. Will Rogers is thrifty and owns a home in New York and California, but as New York considers wealth he is not so rich. David Warfield has profited largely by sound investments.

There are a few others of wealth, but when you consider the large number of stars the list is comparatively small. Each season brings its quota of benefits for those whose names once burned in letters of fire against the Broadway heavens.

Living in the world of illusion, the stage player often brings it into the world of reality. Money becomes the same value of stage money. Then, too, there is the wardrobe to keep up and other expensive items in the eternal splurge the players feel they must maintain.

Eddie Cantor, who has made enormous salaries for many years, admitted that until recently when he put his affairs in hands of a bank he had never saved a cent and was in debt. Cantor is a home loving fellow who does not drink or smoke. Yet he could not save.

Down in an armor factory on Front street is a near sighted, mild mannered little man who might be taken for a bookkeeping druge. Yet he has faced 5,000 bullets aimed at his heart without a tremor. The human target makes his living facing bullets for an armor vest corporation. He has been the demonstrator for many years. The vest he wears weighs about nine pounds. It is constructed of patented graphite and metal plates fitted in sections. The armor looks very much like a tailored vest and can be made to match the suit.

He is an old ocean greyhound who plies the liners to gamble for high stakes. I have seen him here and abroad always where the lights are brightest. He is married and has three boys who are being educated at an exclusive school. He claims to be square in all his gambling and says that he has made it an invariable rule to save 10 per cent of his winnings. By doing this he also says he has $100,000 invested in high grade securities. Yet he points the inevitable moral with: "I'd give all I have had I never touched a card. It is a terrible thing to realize that three fine sons will eventually know that their father was a professional gambler."

Broadway now has a million dollar ballroom which is to be devoted to the uplift of the dance. It is at Broadway and Fifty-third street and it will attempt to join good manners and good taste with good time. It is to be the sort of place where the entire family may go for wholesome amusement. Most public dance halls in New York are tough resorts where "hostesses" are really women of bad repute and where young "cadets" seek to ensnare unsuspecting young womanhood. There will also be high class professional dancing numbers on the stage. The new ballroom is being watched with interest by those who seek to reform the dance.

CANCER MENACE GROWS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Despite the eternal vigilance that the United States government is maintaining over the health of the people, one much dreaded disease is extending its ravages in a death toll gradually mounting from year to year. This disease is cancer.

Figures secured simultaneously from the bureau of census and from the United States public health service, the only two government agencies from which accurate information as to the disease can be secured, point to the same fact, namely, that cancer is gradually increasing, in marked contrast with other diseases and ailments on which the health agencies of the nation have been waging unremitting warfare.

Reports and rumors of cures for this obscure disease reach the public from time to time as to the efficacy of these cures the public health service is silent, while at the same time all the resources of the bureau are engaged in a battle with this invisible enemy. Reluctantly, but nevertheless frankly, the sugeon general and his aides concede that the moment cancer is increasing its margin.

According to the figures of the bureau of census, 86,754 deaths from cancer were reported last year in a registration area composed of territory containing 87.6 per cent of the total population. This represented an increase of 5,816 deaths over 1922. The rate per 100,000 of the population was 89.4 against 86.8 for the previous year.

The bureau estimates that if the unregistered areas, which were comparatively small, maintained the same ratio of deaths, cancer caused 99,000 deaths in the fiscal year 1923-24 as compared with 95,000 for the previous year.

In the case of cancer as compared with other disease tabulated, the figures were adjusted so as to allow for differences in age and sex distribution of the population because, generally speaking, the ravages of the disease hit people in middle life and old age, and consequently a state with a larger proportion of aged may be expected to have more deaths from the disease than a state where the proportion of aged is not so large.

The adjusted figures for 34 states show that in 23 of them cancer fatalities increased. The highest rate was 102.6 per 100,000 for New York and the lowest 52.2 in South Carolina. New York state had a death roll of 12,247 against 11,697 in the previous year; Pennsylvania had 8,253 as compared with 7,782; Illinois 6,636 against 6,440; Ohio 4,760 against 4,637; California 4,693 against 4,447; Michigan 3,516 against 3,441; Mississippi 3,176 against 2,947, and New Jersey 3,162 against 3,021. Wyoming had the lowest number of cancer fatalities with 116 last year compared with 97 for the year before.

The special investigation of the public health service into the various phases of the disease covered 10 states which comprised the registration area in 1900. They are Connecticut, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Vermont. These states were taken because they constituted a fairly homogeneous area both from a population and geographical standpoint.

OLDER PEOPLE ARE VICTIMS

Without going into details of the number of deaths per hundred thousand, Assistant Surgeon General A. M. Stimson, who has charge of the division of scientific research of the public health service, said that the death rate for all forms of cancer has shown a steady and practically continuous rise in these states since 1900. As far as the younger age groups are concerned no changes of great moment are apparent in the death rates. Commencing, however, with the age groups 30-39, a tendency toward increase becomes more marked with each successive decade. Summarizing the results of the investigation, Assistant Surgeon General Stimson said:

"As a result of these studies, it must be concluded that there has been a definite increase in the mortality from cancer in the 10 original registration states, and, moreover, that this is a real and not an apparent increase, which might be accounted for by better diagnosis, shifting of diagnosis, and change in the age constitution of the population."

While not sounding an alarm over the singular phenomenon of a disease increasing its ravages in face of scientific investigation, the public health service regards the disease as one of the major health problems confronting the nation today. Scientists who halt at nothing, not even self-inoculation, if necessary, are working steadily on this major problem in the hygienic laboratory of the public health service. It is safe to say that no medical discovery in two decades would be so universally welcomed by the public at large and acclaimed by the medical world as a cure or a preventive for this dreaded ailment.

The position cancer occupies as an invisible enemy is all the more significant because of the enormous success that the health agencies of the nation have had in combating other diseases that took a heavy toll of life. Warfare, constant and aggressive has practically rid this country of the five great plague diseases—cholera, typhus, yellow fever, bubonic plague and smallpox. There are sporadic outbreaks of the last named, but the toll of life is inconsiderable. They are all under control of accepted remedies and preventives administered by the most militant and vigilant body in the United States, the public health service.

DECREASE IN OTHER DISEASES

What is true of the plagues is equally true of other diseases, the ravages of which have diminished from decade to decade and from year to year. The forces fighting tuberculosis, for instance, are constantly gaining ground on the enemy. The same area that showed a sharp increase for cancer fatalities shows a decrease for tuberculosis fatalities. Last year the latter caused 90,732 deaths as compared with 90,452 in the previous year, but the rate per 100,000 of the population decreased from 97 to 93.6. This shows that cancer as a scourge is catching up with tuberculosis, at least as far as this country is concerned.

The decrease in the fatalities from the latter, according to the public health service, is somewhat greater than that given by the census figures. The significant fact, however, is that since 1900 tuberculosis has dropped from 195.2 deaths per 100,000 of the population to a little over 90 at the present. In other words, the death rate has been reduced to less than half of what it was two decades ago.

An even greater victory has been won against typhoid. In 1900 the victims of this malady numbered 31.3 out of every 100,000 of the population. In 1922 the fatality rate was only 3.9, or roughly one-eighth of what it was 20 years ago. Another scourge which is yielding to science is diphtheria. For the last year 45 states having an aggregate population of approximately 109 millions reported 12,339 deaths from diphtheria as against 14,684 reported by 44 states with a population of approximately one hundred and two millions the previous year.

Except for the standing menace of cancer, so mysterious and so baffling, the story is a story of victory, so much so that in the opinion of the public health service the health conditions of this country today must be regarded as very satisfactory.

One of the serious factors militating against greater progress against the disease enemy, according to Assistant Sugeon General Stimson, is the general tendency throughout the country whereby legislative bodies allot but scanty funds for the development and maintenance of public health agencies in proportion to the importance of their activities to public welfare.

Naval Expenses

Figures don't lie, and it would be hard even for a lying figurer to misrepresent the meaning of certain mathematical facts regarding the American and Japanese naval situation.

What rival powers are spending on their navies ought to be a pretty fair index to the rate at which they are developing their comparative naval strength. Records show that the United States has been spending on her navy, right along, not only a great deal more than Japan, but a great deal more proportionately than is called for by her present ratio of five-to-three in warships.

Only one year in the past five, the 12 months ending last March, has Japan spent half as much as this country. For the present fiscal year she is spending $112,000,000 to our $300,000,000. For the five-year period ending with the year 1924-1925 her total will be $883,000,000 to our $2,107,000,000.

Very likely Japan gets more warships per dollar than we do, but she can hardly get as much for $3 as we get for $7.

Brains and Football

The criticism that football calls for nothing but brawn and is therefore crowding brains out of the colleges and universities is of course an exaggerated statement of a condition that does have some unsatisfactory aspects. Another side is brought to light in the announcement that the captain of the University of Missouri football team has recently been selected a Rhodes scholar.

Many other colleges and universities could point out successful athletes who were also good students, maintaining honestly high standards in their academic work without any favoritism from faculty or fellow-students.

It is possible that there would be still more such happy examples of combined athletic and scholastic attainments if the public attitude toward the intellectually successful undergraduate were improved a little. No school has yet organized a cheering section to inspire and honor the pupil who does sound work in library, laboratory and class room. Very few institutions of higher learning give coveted school letters to the men and women who pass all their courses. Perhaps this is because passing courses is expected of every student while athletic prowess is looked upon as a special service to the school.

The ideal system of education should develop physical health along with mental training and character.

Public Leadership

Bewailing the general lack of political leadership today, William Allen White says, in his Emporia Gazette:

"This world will prosper only when reason removes the evils of the world. Force cannot conquer the evils. And reason will come to men through wise, tolerant, courageous leadership. The best leadership of the world is going not into politics, but into business. Politics in the world today is getting only the left-overs."

It does look so, in many lands, and generally speaking, it is so in America. "Who can say," asks the Emporia sage, "how to attract great men back into politics, where they ruled the earth half a century ago?"

That is the nut for present-day civilization to crack. Government is really more important than it ever was before, or capable of being more important, because it touches such vast interests and affects the welfare of mankind in so many different ways.

Some critics attribute the mediocrity of our present public life to the direct primary and lament the passing of the old-time political convention. Conventions possessing real power did train leaders, whatever their moral defects were. It may prove wise to modify the new system and permit more of the old-fashioned opportunity for organization and the wielding of personal force in politics.

But that will not solve the whole problem. Perhaps it will never be solved until the public attitude toward life changes again, and the ablest men grow weary or dissatisfied with mere business success and turn with new interest to public careers for an outlet of their energies. That will surely come in time, and the time may be nearer than we think.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

TEN MILLION PANCAKES

Berlin celebrated the New Year's arrival by eating 300,000 carp, favorite German fish, and 10,000,000 pfannekuchen. If they were the full sized German pancakes, 10,000,000 were many.

In great American cities, the New Year was welcomed with bootleg whisky that would strip the varnish from the steel wall of a Pullman car.

The New Year is under way. Soon we shall have acquired the habit of writing 1925, instead of 1924, and then the New Year will be an old story.

At the end of 1925 you will easily recognize those unable to take a New Year seriously. They will be about where they were a year before.

FORD'S NEW FACTORY

How big will the Henry Ford concern be when it is full grown? Ford begins 1925 with 6,000,000 more square feet of floor space in his buildings than he had one year ago. That would mean a new factory 100 feet wide, and 60,000 feet long. Quite an expansion.

The bigger he grows, the better, while he continues his efforts to give the people more value for less money. They like to see big fortunes of the Henry Ford type.

If Mr. Ford would devote a few million feet of floor space to garage use at low rates for owners of little cars in big cities, he would help the people and the automobile industry. Car production is a problem solved. The cheap garage is still to come.

A FRANKLIN SIMON PLAN

Merchants all over the country will be interested in a customer's garage plan devised by Franklin Simon, of Fifth avenue, New York.

Mr. Simon has employes to take charge of cars that reach his store, and because of congestion and police rules, cannot be parked nearby. He provides garage space, not far from the store. His chauffeurs take away cars driven by owners, bringing them back to the store entrance when ordered. And the car is insured, free, against damage while in custody of Franklin Simon employes.

This, the first conspicuous effort to deal with New York's problem of street congestion, is important to other cities.

The president told 3,000 scientists in Washington that society and government no longer fear the results of the scientist's search for truth. There are, however, some representatives of old-fashioned religion that still fear and denounce scientific discoveries.

They shuddered when Galileo announced that a round earth goes around the sun. They said "the earth stands still and the entire universe whirls around it. The Bible says so," and they would have burned Galileo for telling the truth had he not wisely got down on his knees, solemnly abjuring, denying and detesting what he knew to be the truth.

Everybody not steeped in superstition knows that the earth is hundreds of millions of years old. Everybody knows that primitive men, with huge jaws and teeth, more like baboons than humans, lived on this earth at least a quarter of a million years ago. And everyone knows and admits, unless he denies the evidence of his senses, that animals lived here endless millions of years before men came, changing through the years by the slow process of evolution.

Yet there are men, normal and sane in other respects, that deny evolution.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The big salaries made by stage stars are rarely turned to good account. More than half of them eventually strike bankruptcy shoals. George M. Cohan is rich, but most of his money was made in the production end.

Fred Stone's wealth was made largely in lucky real estate ventures. He is often reputed to be the richest American actor, yet some consider it significant that his father recently opened up a barber shop in Great Neck.

Otis Skinner is fairly well to do. James K. Hackett is a millionaire, but his was an inheritance. The actor who has perhaps made the biggest showing on his salary alone is Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator. He has played almost continuously for 20 years.

Eltinge is soon to retire to look after his ranch at Alpine, Cal. Will Rogers is thrifty and owns a home in New York and California, but as New York considers wealth he is not so rich. David Warfield has profited largely by sound investments.

There are a few others of wealth, but when you consider the large number of stars the list is comparatively small. Each season brings its quota of benefits for those whose names once burned in letters of fire against the Broadway heavens.

Living in the world of illusion, the stage player often brings it into the world of reality. Money becomes the same value of stage money. Then, too, there is the wardrobe to keep up and other expensive items in the eternal splurge the players feel they must maintain.

Eddie Cantor, who has made enormous salaries for many years, admitted that until recently when he put his affairs in hands of a bank he had never saved a cent and was in debt. Cantor is a home loving fellow who does not drink or smoke. Yet he could not save.

Down in an armor factory on Front street is a near sighted, mild mannered little man who might be taken for a bookkeeping druge. Yet he has faced 5,000 bullets aimed at his heart without a tremor. The human target makes his living facing bullets for an armor vest corporation. He has been the demonstrator for many years. The vest he wears weighs about nine pounds. It is constructed of patented graphite and metal plates fitted in sections. The armor looks very much like a tailored vest and can be made to match the suit.

He is an old ocean greyhound who plies the liners to gamble for high stakes. I have seen him here and abroad always where the lights are brightest. He is married and has three boys who are being educated at an exclusive school. He claims to be square in all his gambling and says that he has made it an invariable rule to save 10 per cent of his winnings. By doing this he also says he has $100,000 invested in high grade securities. Yet he points the inevitable moral with: "I'd give all I have had I never touched a card. It is a terrible thing to realize that three fine sons will eventually know that their father was a professional gambler."

Broadway now has a million dollar ballroom which is to be devoted to the uplift of the dance. It is at Broadway and Fifty-third street and it will attempt to join good manners and good taste with good time. It is to be the sort of place where the entire family may go for wholesome amusement. Most public dance halls in New York are tough resorts where "hostesses" are really women of bad repute and where young "cadets" seek to ensnare unsuspecting young womanhood. There will also be high class professional dancing numbers on the stage. The new ballroom is being watched with interest by those who seek to reform the dance.

CANCER MENACE GROWS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Despite the eternal vigilance that the United States government is maintaining over the health of the people, one much dreaded disease is extending its ravages in a death toll gradually mounting from year to year. This disease is cancer.

Figures secured simultaneously from the bureau of census and from the United States public health service, the only two government agencies from which accurate information as to the disease can be secured, point to the same fact, namely, that cancer is gradually increasing, in marked contrast with other diseases and ailments on which the health agencies of the nation have been waging unremitting warfare.

Reports and rumors of cures for this obscure disease reach the public from time to time as to the efficacy of these cures the public health service is silent, while at the same time all the resources of the bureau are engaged in a battle with this invisible enemy. Reluctantly, but nevertheless frankly, the surgeon general and his aides concede that the moment cancer is increasing its margin.

According to the figures of the bureau of census, 86,754 deaths from cancer were reported last year in a registration area composed of territory containing 87.6 per cent of the total population. This represented an increase of 5,816 deaths over 1922. The rate per 100,000 of the population was 89.4 against 86.8 for the previous year.

The bureau estimates that if the unregistered areas, which were comparatively small, maintained the same ratio of deaths, cancer caused 99,000 deaths in the fiscal year 1923-24 as compared with 95,000 for the previous year.

In the case of cancer as compared with other disease tabulated, the figures were adjusted so as to allow for differences in age and sex distribution of the population because, generally speaking, the ravages of the disease hit people in middle life and old age, and consequently a state with a larger proportion of aged may be expected to have more deaths from the disease than a state where the proportion of aged is not so large.

The adjusted figures for 34 states show that in 23 of them cancer fatalities increased. The highest rate was 102.6 per 100,000 for New York and the lowest 52.2 in South Carolina. New York state had a death roll of 12,247 against 11,697 in the previous year; Pennsylvania had 8,253 as compared with 7,782; Illinois 6,636 against 6,440; Ohio 4,760 against 4,637; California 4,693 against 4,447; Michigan 3,516 against 3,441; Mississippi 3,176 against 2,947, and New Jersey 3,162 against 3,021. Wyoming had the lowest number of cancer fatalities with 116 last year compared with 97 for the year before.

The special investigation of the public health service into the various phases of the disease covered 10 states which comprised the registration area in 1900. They are Connecticut, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Vermont. These states were taken because they constituted a fairly homogeneous area both from a population and geographical standpoint.

OLDER PEOPLE ARE VICTIMS

Without going into details of the number of deaths per hundred thousand, Assistant Surgeon General A. M. Stimson, who has charge of the division of scientific research of the public health service, said that the death rate for all forms of cancer has shown a steady and practically continuous rise in these states since 1900. As far as the younger age groups are concerned no changes of great moment are apparent in the death rates. Commencing, however, with the age groups 30-39, a tendency toward increase becomes more marked with each successive decade. Summarizing the results of the investigation, Assistant Surgeon General Stimson said:

"As a result of these studies, it must be concluded that there has been a definite increase in the mortality from cancer in the 10 original registration states, and, moreover, that this is a real and not an apparent increase, which might be accounted for by better diagnosis, shifting of diagnosis, and change in the age constitution of the population."

While not sounding an alarm over the singular phenomenon of a disease increasing its ravages in face of scientific investigation, the public health service regards the disease as one of the major health problems confronting the nation today. Scientists who halt at nothing, not even self-inoculation, if necessary, are working steadily on this major problem in the hygienic laboratory of the public health service. It is safe to say that no medical discovery in two decades would be so universally welcomed by the public at large and acclaimed by the medical world as a cure or a preventive for this dreaded ailment.

The position cancer occupies as an invisible enemy is all the more significant because of the enormous success that the health agencies of the nation have had in combating other diseases that took a heavy toll of life. Warfare, constant and aggressive has practically rid this country of the five great plague diseases—cholera, typhus, yellow fever, bubonic plague and smallpox. There are sporadic outbreaks of the last named, but the toll of life is inconsiderable. They are all under control of accepted remedies and preventives administered by the most militant and vigilant body in the United States, the public health service.

DECREASE IN OTHER DISEASES

What is true of the plagues is equally true of other diseases, the ravages of which have diminished from decade to decade and from year to year. The forces fighting tuberculosis, for instance, are constantly gaining ground on the enemy. The same area that showed a sharp increase for cancer fatalities shows a decrease for tuberculosis fatalities. Last year the latter caused 90,732 deaths as compared with 90,452 in the previous year, but the rate per 100,000 of the population decreased from 97 to 93.6. This shows that cancer as a scourge is catching up with tuberculosis, at least as far as this country is concerned.

The decrease in the fatalities from the latter, according to the public health service, is somewhat greater than that given by the census figures. The significant fact, however, is that since 1900 tuberculosis has dropped from 195.2 deaths per 100,000 of the population to a little over 90 at the present. In other words, the death rate has been reduced to less than half of what it was two decades ago.

An even greater victory has been won against typhoid. In 1900 the victims of this malady numbered 31.3 out of every 100,000 of the population. In 1922 the fatality rate was only 3.9, or roughly one-eighth of what it was 20 years ago. Another scourge which is yielding to science is diphtheria. For the last year 45 states having an aggregate population of approximately 109 millions reported 12,339 deaths from diphtheria as against 14,684 reported by 44 states with a population of approximately one hundred and two millions the previous year.

Except for the standing menace of cancer, so mysterious and so baffling, the story is a story of victory, so much so that in the opinion of the public health service the health conditions of this country today must be regarded as very satisfactory.

One of the serious factors militating against greater progress against the disease enemy, according to Assistant Sugeon General Stimson, is the general tendency throughout the country whereby legislative bodies allot but scanty funds for the development and maintenance of public health agencies in proportion to the importance of their activities to public welfare.

The only entrance to the laboratory after midnight is through the police roll room, and how the thief got in and out is puzzling the police.

WILMINGTON — Proximity of the police failed to prevent the theft of a number of culture tubes used by physicians in the treatment of diphtheria. The tubes were stolen from a laboratory directly over the headquarters of the police in the public building.

The only entrance to the laboratory after midnight is through the police roll room, and how the thief got in and out is puzzling the police.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

XX

Karesia had not been asleep when Rossiter had brought his limp burden to her door. Warned by a burning head and chilly feet that she would not sleep until perhaps the dead hour before morning, when strained nerves usually yield to utter weariness, she had put on a negligé and had built a fire in the big room. Mary Bliss had crept to her own room long ago.

It had been all very well to say, under the spur of excitement, "I shall go straight on—the future shall decide," but the more Karesia had pondered, the more certain she became that to "go straight on" was going to be terribly difficult; so much depended on Rossiter's attitude, and, so far, Karesia could not fathom his intentions. Her thoughts were anxious enough, but really what was keeping her awake and watchful was the hope of a message from Dascome, some relief from suspense. For, with eyes opened or closed, she saw him racing along those glassy streets, chasing that mad girl, tearing along to destruction. There would be an accident to one or the other.

Karesia had been asking of the fire questions she could not answer, ears strained, meanwhile, for the telephone, when she heard heavy steps on the gallery. Could it be Dascome? She reached the door before Rossiter had had time to knock. When Karesia opened the door, he was shifting his burden so as to free one hand. For an instant she thought it was Dascome; who the girl was, she had no doubt. Then she saw Rossiter's face and stood petrified; for a moment she could not gasp even his peculiar greeting:

"You don't mean to say you're alone! Doubtless he will appear later. Meantime, here is a reminder, Kara mia—we'll see whether time has made you a little more human," and he stepped in with his burden hanging limp over his shoulder.

Even then, Karesia had not realized. "Rand! Is she hurt much? What——"

"Hurt!" he said sharply. "No. She's drunk—like any mere man! If you want to pack your grip and run to the antipodes, just say so and I'll find some woman who's not so much of a saint that she has no sympathy for a sinner." His vivid blue eyes blazed with scorn and anger. He let his burden slip from his shoulder into his arm and the girl's head dropped back, her fair face, hot and flushed, turned full to the light. "John Dascome's daughter, Kara dear—what shall I do with her?"

As usual, Karesia calmed quickly. "I know who she is, Rand. I am glad she wasn't killed. Bring her up to my room," and she led the way swiftly.

Rossiter had carried Clarice up and had laid her on Karesia's bed, his lips tight, his eyes smouldering. "You see, Kara, even girls all in this way, occasionally—sad but true."

"Shall I telephone for a doctor?" Karesia asked.

"A doctor! No. She'll sleep it off, as I would, or any one else. However, adoration of the father may enable you to lay a little cracked ice on the brow of the daughter—it would be helpful. Sleep will do the rest." He bent and put back gently the hair which had fallen over Clarice's face. "Poor little kid! Don't I know what it's like! A cloth rung out in ice water would be better, Kara."

Karesia turned and almost fell over Mary Bliss who stood shrinking and shaking in the doorway. She caught Karesia's arm. "What has he done to her?" she asked convulsively. "That—man!"

"Hush!" Karesia said. "He is being kind to her! Get the basin in your room and some towels while I get the ice. She has been drinking too much, Mary—that's all."

Mary Bliss scrambled back into her room and Karesia sped downstairs. When she returned, Rossiter was standing, looking about him, at the appointments of her room, the touches of red and orange. When Mary Bliss slid in, hiding herself behind Karesia as much as possible, he looked at her, watched her with interest as she knelt beside the bed. Though evidently in shrinking terror of him—the glance she stole over her shoulder was akin to horror—she seemed more capable in such an emergency than Karesia. He caught her mumbled demand, "Tell him to go away!" It was she who began to unhook Clarice's dress.

"I'll wait downstairs," he said, and turned on his heel.

Rossiter had searched about downstairs until he found the telephone. He had telephoned then to his Japanese boy that he was coming home in a few minutes. Then he went into the big room and waited, his lips compressed, his eyes brilliant, until Karesia came down. He heard her at the telephone, calling up the Hollywood Hotel and asking for Dascome. Evidently they gave her a number, for he heard her call a city number. She received no answer, for she came back into the hall.

He looked at her in the same tight-lipped, vivid way. "He will be along presently, Kara. Don't be impatient."

Karesia paid no attention to the sneer. "Do you know where he is? He ought to be told that she is safe."

"I haven't the faintest idea where he is. I expected to find him here."

"Where did you find her?" Karesia persisted. "Perhaps he has gone there?"

"I was at the Hollywood Hotel for a few minutes tonight and some one came in and said that they had seen Clarice Dascome and a party of people driving like mad to Los Angeles—that they were all of them the worse for what they'd had to drink. I know of that crowd, a man named Deeme is one of them, and I guessed that they would go to his house. I guessed how it would be with her, so I went there and brought her away. What made you think she was hurt?"

"Mr. Dascome and I met her, with those people, coming from Bervely. She was driving at a fearful rate, in that fog. Her father let me out at the Boulevard, then he went after her. He must be searching yet—unless he has had an accident. Those streets!" Karesia was pallied with anxiety. "Can't you—won't you get word to him, somehow?" she begged.

"So you've spent the evening alone," he returned.

Karesia flushed, but she controlled herself. "Yes."

EX-HIGH STARS LAND CONTEST

High Passers Defeated In Floor Game, Score 54 to 30.

Chester high basketball team went down to defeat last evening at the hands of Ex-High on the Rock Springs park floor, score 54 to 30.

The game was witnessed by a good sized crowd of floor fans.

High played a good article of basketball and at times really outplayed the former stars, but the latter with their greater experience had no difficulty in piling up a commanding lead which they held until the finish.

High was the first to score when Bennet tossed a foul goal. Ex-High promptly tied up the game on a similar toss by Johnston. Wyant tossed the first field goal for Ex-High and from this stage the ex-stars began to run up points with Hamilton and Wyant doing most of the scoring. The first half ended with Ex-High leading by a score of 31 to 16.

During the final quarter High drew within eight points of their opponents, but the latter put on steam and soon had the game safely tucked away by a good margin. Greenspun, former local star, was blanked until the final few minutes of play when he succeeded in securing a field goal.

Hamilton and Wyant were the leading scorers for Ex-High making 39 points while Greenspun started many of the plays which resulted in markers. Bennett, Pinney and Simcox performed in good style for High as did Johnston, Cox, Patton and Stevens. Bennett with seven field goals led the scoring for High.

Chester High girls won the preliminary game from East Liverpool High Juniors by a score of 27 to 14. The locals led at the end of the first half by a score of 14 to 7. This margin was increased in the last period of play. Miss Paisley was the star for Chester, scoring all but two of the points made by her team. Misses McElravey and Cooper were the best scorers for the Junior girls.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

EX-HIGH STARS LAND CONTEST

High Passers Defeated In Floor Game, Score 54 to 30.

Chester high basketball team went down to defeat last evening at the hands of Ex-High on the Rock Springs park floor, score 54 to 30.

The game was witnessed by a good sized crowd of floor fans.

High played a good article of basketball and at times really outplayed the former stars, but the latter with their greater experience had no difficulty in piling up a commanding lead which they held until the finish.

High was the first to score when Bennet tossed a foul goal. Ex-High promptly tied up the game on a similar toss by Johnston. Wyant tossed the first field goal for Ex-High and from this stage the ex-stars began to run up points with Hamilton and Wyant doing most of the scoring. The first half ended with Ex-High leading by a score of 31 to 16.

During the final quarter High drew within eight points of their opponents, but the latter put on steam and soon had the game safely tucked away by a good margin. Greenspun, former local star, was blanked until the final few minutes of play when he succeeded in securing a field goal.

Hamilton and Wyant were the leading scorers for Ex-High making 39 points while Greenspun started many of the plays which resulted in markers. Bennett, Pinney and Simcox performed in good style for High as did Johnston, Cox, Patton and Stevens. Bennett with seven field goals led the scoring for High.

Chester High girls won the preliminary game from East Liverpool High Juniors by a score of 27 to 14. The locals led at the end of the first half by a score of 14 to 7. This margin was increased in the last period of play. Miss Paisley was the star for Chester, scoring all but two of the points made by her team. Misses McElravey and Cooper were the best scorers for the Junior girls.

COLUMBIANA COUNTY FARMERS ACTIVE DURING PAST YEAR

Accomplishments Pointed Out in Figures From Various Bureaus Devoted to Interest of Agriculturists.

During 1924 applications were received by John G. Houlette, secretary-treasurer of the Columbiana County National Farm Loan association, for loans totaling $98,100, this volume being divided among 29 applicants.

Of this volume of business, 22 loans were closed, aggregating $67,700, and three loans, totaling $4,500, are pending.

During the year, eight loans were rejected, amounting to $33,600, and five loans, aggregating $14,500, were withdrawn.

The capital stock of the association is placed at $30,000 and there has been $11,475 stock issued. Dividends amounting to $531.53 have been paid, according to the annual report.

The association is an active branch of the national farm loan, and has been operating in this county for several years with considerable success.

Considerable activity prevailed in this county last year among farmers who purchased their supplies through the co-operative agencies of the Columbiana County Farm bureau. The largest purchase was cattle feed, there having been bought through co-operative channels 1,192.5 tons.

There was also sold through this channel 520 sacks of sugar and 43 tons of salt. There were 547 bales of twine bought and distributed among the farmers of the county, and 11,011 bushels of certified seed potatoes were shipped into the county.

On top of these purchases, there was also shipped into the county 1,522.5 tons of fertilizer, and also 6,937 tons of lime. The distribution of all these supplies was under the direction of Field Service Manager Phil E. Heim, and the distribution was made during 11 months last year, beginning with February.

Fifteen townships took an active part in clothing construction work last year, this feature being advanced by the Columbiana County Farm bureau, and first instruction work given by Miss Wirt, clothing specialist of the home economic department of the extension service of Ohio State university.

There were 136 demonstrations held in these 15 townships during the old year, with a total attendance of 920 women. A total of 575 garments were started by these women, and official reports show that 406 were completed.

Township leaders were appointed at the first organization meeting, which was held in Lisbon, and when these leaders returned to their homes meeting and demonstrations were held in these particular townships.

It is interesting to note that many women living in the larger cities of the county became interested in this activity of the farm bureau and sought information about the demonstrations direct from the farm bureau offices.

In all only 10 clubs of various kinds were organized among the boys and girls of the county last year, the four pig clubs being the largest number formed in any one branch of activity. Two clothing clubs were formed and three canning clubs, but only one calf club was organied during the old year.

However, it is recorded that 55 boys and girls started in the market pig class and all carried their work through until the latter part of August.

Last August the market advanced 32 cents per pound and about 50 members of the club took advantage of the market and sold their stock on the rise. Because of this business move those who sold their stocks did not have the opportunity to finish the club work outlined for the season.

Five boys who did complete their pig club work were taken to the Pittsburg stock yards, where they spent the day seeing their stock arrive, graded and sold.

The work of the period for the calf, canning and clothing clubs was finished as scheduled.

Two cow testing associations were formed in this county last year with a total membership of 45 herd owners and representing 672 head of cattle. There were 48 farms in the county adopting improved practices in the sanitary production and care of milk last year.

It is rathering to note that in the Columbiana County Live Stock Shipping association last year 557 members were enrolled, and the Columbiana County Sheep and Wool Growers' association had 231 members.

There were eight members in the County Apple Grading association, and 510 stockholders combined in the Kensington Supply company of Kensington and the Salona Supply company of Salem.

During 1924 County Agent C. E. Rowland, who resigned December 24 to take up similar work in Lorain county, visited 391 different farms and visited 538 farms in conducting extension work. He also visited 12 different homes in the conduct of extension work. There were 240 demonstration meetings held in the rural communities of the county last year, the total attendance being 3,846.

During the seven farm institutes held in the county during 1924 there was a total attendance of 9,135.

CASE IS APPEALED TO HIGHER COURT

The transcript in the case of Jesse T. Bonsall against Ellsworth E. Feicht, which was tried in the court of Justice of the Peace H. E. Gleckler at Salem, has been received in common pleas court, having been carried higher by Feicht on appeal.

Bonsall filed an affidavit against Feicht declaring the defendant "did assault and threaten to strike, shoot and kill Jesse T. Bonsall." This charge was filed November 24. Feicht was returned to the court the same day by Constable Walter Davidson, of Salem, and bond was given for a hearing on November 26.

In the meantime Bonsall became ill and the cause was continued until December 13, when the court required Feicht to give $200 bond to keep the peace for a term of six months.

Columbiana

According to all reports the prospects for 1925 in Columbiana's various industries are very bright and look much better than they did a year ago. Practically all the shops have been working full time for the past two months and will continue to do so, while those who have not been on full time expect orders this month which will enable them to do likewise. Stock taking is practically over now and some shops worked New Year's Day. Few towns the size of Columbiana are fortunate in having the varied industries to be found there. While the largest employe only a little more than a hundred men and the smallest fifteen or twenty, yet the number and variety compensate for this. Columbiana boasts of a pump factory, a boiler shop, a machine shop specializing in sawmill machinery and engines, another machine shop making tire-building machinery, two foundries, a grease factory, a shop making cement-block machines, a tool works, besides several smaller shops engaged in automobile repair, etc. A valuable addition to these this month will be the Franklin Furniture Co., which is busily engaged in remodeling the old Columbia Tire plant, and expects to move in very shortly.

The usual number of watch parties marked the passing of the old year and the coming of 1925. The Epworth league of the M. E. church celebrated with an entertainment enjoyed by a large number of guests, including some from Leetonia and other nearby towns. Stereopticon views, a program of music and reading, and refreshments weere features of the evening.

The Columbiana Christian Church held a watch party in the church basement at which time 1925 plans for the Sunday school were entered into, and a reorganization affected. A program and refreshments entertained the large audience present.

The local lodge of Knights of Pythias held open house to their friends and families, and anyone that dropped in was made welcome, everything being free to all. An oyster supper was served and dancing enjoyed until the early hours of the New Year.

An interesting event ushering in the New Year was the party given by Miss Helen Coblentz at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Coblentz, to a group of her high school associates. Dancing, cards and other games were enjoyed and delicious refreshments served at an early hour in 1925. Those present were: Misses Helen Lower, Janet Keller, Marian Hartman, Marjory Dieffenbacher, Doris Orr, Jane Baughman and Pauline Bosseller; and Messrs. Lee Bookwalter, Marcus Holloway, George Barr, Harold Burkle, Tromaine Hoffman and Curtis Detwiler.

Columbiana's volunteer fire department started in the New Year in a busy manner, getting their first call at 4:30 a. m. New Years morning, to Fairfield avenue. The floor of the living room in the home of Mrs. S. B. Householder, on Fairfield avenue, had caught fire from an open fireplace, burning a hole in the floor and damaging some of the furniture. Prompt assistance from the neighbors got the blaze under control before the arrival of the firemen, who finished putting out the blaze with their chemical equipment.

A number of Columbiana families celebrated New Year's day by driving to Cleveland to see "The Miracle" at the public auditorius. The group included: Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Feiger, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. Wick Frye, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Bassinger and son, Bobby, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clapp and son, Hubert.

The last day of 1924 found the population of Columbiana increased by two, the stork presenting a baby girl to Prof. and Mrs. I. H. Weaver, and a boy to Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Lake.

Mrs. Bernice McMahon and children of Canton returned home after a visit of several days with Mrs. McMahon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Flickinger. The McMahons expect to move to Youngstown sometime this month.

COLUMBIANA COUNTY FARMERS ACTIVE DURING PAST YEAR

Accomplishments Pointed Out in Figures From Various Bureaus Devoted to Interest of Agriculturists.

During 1924 applications were received by John G. Houlette, secretary-treasurer of the Columbiana County National Farm Loan association, for loans totaling $98,100, this volume being divided among 29 applicants.

Of this volume of business, 22 loans were closed, aggregating $67,700, and three loans, totaling $4,500, are pending.

During the year, eight loans were rejected, amounting to $33,600, and three loans, aggregating $14,500, were withdrawn.

The capital stock of the association is placed at $30,000 and there has been $11,475 stock issued. Dividends amounting to $531.53 have been paid, according to the annual report.

The association is an active branch of the national farm loan, and has been operating in this county for several years with considerable success.

Considerable activity prevailed in this county last year among farmers who purchased their supplies through the co-operative agencies of the Columbiana County Farm bureau. The largest purchase was cattle feed, there having been bought through cooperative channels 1,192.5 tons.

There was also sold through this channel 520 sacks of sugar and 43 tons of salt. There were 547 bales of twine bought and distributed among the farmers of the county, and 11,011 bushels of certified seed potatoes were shipped into the county.

On top of these purchases, there was also shipped into the county 92.5 tons of fertilizer, and also 6,937 tons of lime. The distribution of all these supplies was under the direction of Field Service Manager Phil E. Heim, and the distribution was made during 11 months last year, beginning with February.

Fifteen townships took an active part in clothing construction work last year, this feature being advanced by the Columbiana County Farm bureau, and first instruction work given by Miss Wirt, clothing specialist of the home economic department of the extension service of Ohio State university.

There were 136 demonstrations held in these 15 townships during the old year, with a total attendance of 920 women. A total of 575 garments were started by these women, and official reports show that 406 were completed.

Township leaders were appointed at the first organization meeting, which was held in Lisbon, and when these leaders returned to their homes meeting and demonstrations were held in these particular townships.

It is interesting to note that many women living in the larger cities of the county became interested in this activity of the farm bureau and sought information about the demonstrations direct from the farm bureau offices.

In all only 10 clubs of various kinds were organized among the boys and girls of the county last year, the four pig clubs being the largest number formed in any one branch of activity. Two clothing clubs were formed and three canning clubs, but only one calf club was organied during the old year.

However, it is recorded that 55 boys and girls started in the market pig class and all carried their work through until the latter part of August.

Last August the market advanced 12 cents per pound and about 50 members of the club took advantage of the market and sold their stock on the rise. Because of this business move those who sold their stocks did not have the opportunity to finish the club work outlined for the season.

Five boys who did complete their pig club work were taken to the Pittsburg stock yards, where they spent the day seeing their stock arrive, graded and sold.

The work of the period for the calf, canning and clothing clubs was finished as scheduled.

Two cow testing associations were formed in this county last year with a total membership of 45 herd owners and representing 672 head of cattle. There were 48 farms in the county adopting improved practices in the sanitary production and care of milk last year.

It is rathering to note that in the Columbiana County Live Stock Shipping association last year 557 members were enrolled, and the Columbiana County Sheep and Wool Growers' association had 231 members.

There were eight members in the County Apple Grading association, and 510 stockholders combined in the Kensington Supply company of Kensington and the Salona Supply company of Salem.

During 1924 County Agent C. E. Rowland, who resigned December 24 to take up similar work in Lorain county, visited 391 different farms and visited 538 farms in conducting extension work. He also visited 12 different homes in the conduct of extension work. There were 240 demonstration meetings held in the rural communities of the county last year, the total attendance being 3,846.

During the seven farm institutes held in the county during 1924 there was a total attendance of 9,135.

CASE IS APPEALED TO HIGHER COURT

The transcript in the case of Jesse T. Bonsall against Ellsworth E. Feicht, which was tried in the court of Justice of the Peace H. E. Gleckler at Salem, has been received in common pleas court, having been carried higher by Feicht on appeal.

Bonsall filed an affidavit against Feicht declaring the defendant "did assault and threaten to strike, shoot and kill Jesse T. Bonsall." This charge was filed November 24. Feicht was returned to the court the same day by Constable Walter Davidson, of Salem, and bond was given for a hearing on November 26.

In the meantime Bonsall became ill and the cause was continued until December 13, when the court required Feicht to give $200 bond to keep the peace for a term of six months.

The plaintiff in this case sets up title to certain property consisting of 14.64 acres of land in Fairfield township, section 17. Some of the defendants who are minors, but heirs, are residing in Youngstown.

Columbiana

According to all reports the prospects for 1925 in Columbiana's various industries are very bright and look much better than they did a year ago. Practically all the shops have been working full time for the past two months and will continue to do so, while those who have not been on full time expect orders this month which will enable them to do likewise. Stock taking is practically over now and some shops worked New Year's Day. Few towns the size of Columbiana are fortunate in having the varied industries to be found there. While the largest employe only a little more than a hundred men and the smallest fifteen or twenty, yet the number and variety compensate for this. Columbiana boasts of a pump factory, a boiler shop, a machine shop specializing in sawmill machinery and engines, another machine shop making tire-building machinery, two foundries, a grease factory, a shop making cement-block machines, a tool works, besides several smaller shops engaged in automobile repair, etc. A valuable addition to these this month will be the Franklin Furniture Co., which is busily engaged in remodeling the old Columbia Tire plant, and expects to move in very shortly.

The usual number of watch parties marked the passing of the old year and the coming of 1925. The Epworth league of the M. E. church celebrated with an entertainment enjoyed by a large number of guests, including some from Leetonia and other nearby towns. Stereopticon views, a program of music and reading, and refreshments weere features of the evening.

The Columbiana Christian Church held a watch party in the church basement at which time 1925 plans for the Sunday school were entered into, and a reorganization affected. A program and refreshments entertained the large audience present.

The local lodge of Knights of Pythias held open house to their friends and families, and anyone that dropped in was made welcome, everything being free to all. An oyster supper was served and dancing enjoyed until the early hours of the New Year.

An interesting event ushering in the New Year was the party given by Miss Helen Coblentz at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Coblentz, to a group of her high school associates. Dancing, cards and other games were enjoyed and delicious refreshments served at an early hour in 1925. Those present were: Misses Helen Lower, Janet Keller, Marian Hartman, Marjory Dieffenbacher, Doris Orr, Jane Baughman and Pauline Sponseller; and Messrs. Lee Bookwalter, Marcus Holloway, George Barr, Harold Burkle, Tromaine Hoffman and Curtis Detwiler.

Columbiana's volunteer fire department started in the New Year in a busy manner, getting their first call at 4:30 a. m. New Years morning, to Fairfield avenue. The floor of the living room in the home of Mrs. S. B. Householder, on Fairfield avenue, had caught fire from an open fireplace, burning a hole in the floor and damaging some of the furniture. Prompt assistance from the neighbors got the blaze under control before the arrival of the firemen, who finished putting out the blaze with their chemical equipment.

A number of Columbiana families celebrated New Year's day by driving to Cleveland to see "The Miracle" at the public auditorius. The group included: Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Felger, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. Wick Frye, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Bassinger and son, Bobby, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clapp and son, Hubert.

The last day of 1924 found the population of Columbiana increased by two, the stork presenting a baby girl to Prof. and Mrs. I. H. Weaver, and a boy to Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Lake.

Mrs. Bernice McMahon and children of Canton returned home after a visit of several days with Mrs. McMahon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Flickinger. The McMahons expect to move to Youngstown sometime this month.

SERMONOGRAMS

There are no little sins.

Preach the gospel, do not defend it.

No man can rise to high places on low motives.

True joy is found in giving, not in grabbing.

One who hates suffers more than the one he hates.

There would be less gloom if we gave Christ more room.

There is much pity wasted on self which rightly belongs to some one else.

The person whom we dislike is not the one about whom it is safe to talk.

Prosperity proves to be a means of grace to very few people.

You will make some mishaps this year, but do not repeat the mistakes of last year.

You can hardly make a friend in a year, but you can easily offend one in an hour.

What we really care for in our friends is not their talents or achievements, but their kindly ways and their warm hearts.

"Thou shalt not steal," reputation, happiness, time or credit that belongs to thy neighbor, any more than his material possessions.

No one can read the Bible daily and thoughtfully without gain from the practice. New ideals will be given him, messages will come to him that will uplift his life and ennoble his character.

Since 1890 the population of the United States has increased 68 per cent and church membership 118 4 per cent. We wonder if the meaning of church membership has likewise increased 118 4 per cent. We are optimists, but still the question persists.

The diminished gifts of the Methodist Episcopal church has compelled a cut of 38 per cent foreign missions; this fact, with a debt of three million dollars of the Foreign Mission Board will reduce the appropriations for this board over that of last year, $1,253,980.00.

The present peaceful condition in Ireland has been a surprise to many. The cause for this sudden radical change is generally conceded to be due to the great revival which has appeared among the people. America needs what Ireland now has.

The latest example of the current trend in favor of uniting downtown church properties with income producing plants is the Baptist Temple in Rochester, New York, which is to be fourteen stories high, and exclusive of the site will be valued at $2,750,000. SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

1. What do you think of a teacher who does not attend church services?

The teacher who does not attend the services of the church is by example destroying a large proportion of the good which might be accomplished through her instruction. The purpose of the school is not only to teach the Word of God, but also to train in religion and develop the spiritual life. One of the most necessary elements in the development of the spiritual life is regular church attendance. The teacher who is in earnest in her work will for her own sake and for the value of the example set, be found regularly in the place of worship.

2. What are some of the reasons for removing a teacher from the Sunday school staff?

Inability to teach clearly, inability to discipline, inability to interest class, lacking consecration, failure to prepare lesson, frequent absences, persistent tardiness, immaturity, old age, immorality, indiscretion, heterodox doctrinal views, lack of harmony with the administration, lacking interest in the work, ill health, neglect to perform required duties.

HOME TRAINING

"Here, boy, let me have a paper."

"Yes, but that was done in the other block where I could call at the top of my voice."

"What does that matter? Come now, no fooling; I'm in a hurry."

"Can't sell a paper in this block, mister, because it belongs to Limpy. He is just up at the other side. He'll be here in a few minutes. You'll meet him."

"And who is Limpy, and why does he have this block?"

"Because he is a cripple and this is the best block for selling papers; we paper boys have agreed that this should be Limpy's block, and the first chap caught selling papers here should be thrashed."

"Yes, I see, you have a sort of brotherhood among yourselves. I shall be very glad to wait for Limpy." D. CARL YODER.

Institute Scheduled.

DEFIANCE—The annual independent farmers' institute is tentatively scheduled to be held here February 25-26.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

1. How did Jesus prove his knowledge of prophecy in this incident?
2. How and why do we observe Palm Sunday?
3. What are some of the ways in which we can prepare a path for Jesus in the world and make him king?
4. What is the place and value of street processions and pageantry?
5. What kind of criticism is proper and useful in the church and what kind is blameworthy and harmful?
6. What is the responsibility of his followers toward the world's recognition of the kingship of Christ?

CLERICUS SAYS: Unless we know Christ to be the Saviour of our souls and the Lamb of God, we shall soon tire of singing hosannas in his train and want a king with more pretensions; but if we have learned who and what he is to us, then let us open our months wide, and not be afraid of letting the world hear our shout of praise.

Lesson Prayer.

Dear Jesus, we would be reminded of thy kingship. We come to thee today as a child comes to his father or his mother. We need thee! Fold us in thine arms, assure us of they forgiving love, and strengthen us for life's duties. In thy conquering name we pray. Amen.

Book Review.

"A study of Adult Life" by Theodore G. Soares, Pilgrim Congregational Press, Boston, is a text book in the Standard Course in Teacher Training, outlined and approved by the Sunday School Counsel of Evangelical Denominations. It is filled with suggestions for effective leadership.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

Making Christ Our King.
International Lesson for January 4.
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

On the morning of Palm Sunday there was a great stir in Bethany and along the roads leading to Jerusalem. It was understood that Jesus was to enter the city that day. The people were gathering in crowds and seemed bent on signalizing his entrance with a great popular pageant. Jesus for the first time permitted a public recognition and celebration of his rights as Messiah and King. It was the springtime and a mass of fresh colors lay palpitating on the landscape, the air was balmy and fragrant with the breath of spring and over all the scene flashed the splendor of an Oriental sky.

An Eventful Day.

A colt was procured and the disciples, having thrown their robes on it, placed Jesus on it and the procession started. It would not have compared in magnitude with many a procession that attended the triumphal entry of a Roman conqueror or the coronation of a king or even the inauguration of a president, but it meant more for the world. Slowly the line of shouting followers and at the sunimit Jerusalem broke upon the view. The city sat like a jeweled crown on the brow of Mount Zion. In the foreground rose the marble walls of the temple stainless whiteness, crowned with its glittering gilded roof, a mass of snow and gold; in the background stretched the streets and squares of the city; and over it lay the spell of a thousand years of patriotic and sacred associations. At the first sight of the city Jesus burst into tears. What an unaccountable interruption of the festivities of the hour! Even in the midst of his joys and triumphs Jesus was a man of sorrows acquainted with grief and in the midst of our triumphs and gladdest hours we may have reason enough for tears. The procession passed on into the city and Jesus went up

CHURCH ITEMS FROM WORLD

Nearly 150,000 divorces were granted in the United States in 1923, or one for every eight marriages.

The Railroad Y. M. C. A. finds that 540,400 railroad men attended religious meetings during the past year and 1830 made decisions to live the Christian life.

There has been recently organized in Germany a Federal Council of 26 Protestant Evangelical churches having a membership of 38,000,000.

Lord Robert Cecil, veteran British minister and parliamentarian, is the winner of the first annual $25,000 prize of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation for service toward peace.

A decrease of 93 per cent in Jewish immigration into the United States is shown by the report of the Bureau of immigration for July and August as compared with the same months of the preceding year.

More than one hundred million dollars is spent in China every year in worthless idolatrous worship. As converts increase in the village, the money now going into idol temples and to support idol priests will be turned into Christian channels.

Since 1890 the population of the United States has increased 68 per cent and church membership 118 4 per cent. We wonder if the meaning of church membership has likewise increased 118 4 per cent. We are optimists, but still the question persists.

The diminished gifts of the Methodist Episcopal church has compelled a cut of 38 per cent foreign missions; this fact, with a debt of three million dollars of the Foreign Mission Board will reduce the appropriations for this board over that of last year, $1,253,980.00.

The present peaceful condition in Ireland has been a surprise to many. The cause for this sudden radical change is generally conceded to be due to the great revival which has appeared among the people. America needs what Ireland now has.

The latest example of the current trend in favor of uniting downtown church properties with income producing plants is the Baptist Temple in Rochester, New York, which is to be fourteen stories high, and exclusive of the site will be valued at $2,750,000. The congregation has taken out $100,000 insurance on the life of their pastor, Rev. Clinton Wunder, who came to the church in 1921 while a senior at Rochester Theological Seminary.

The following is the list of the twenty-five most influential ministers of the United States, according to the vote taken by the Christian Century of Chicago: Charles R. Brown, New Haven; Henry Sloane Coffin, New York; S. Parkes Cadman, Brooklyn; Russell H. Conwell, Philadelphia; Harry Emerson Fosdick, New York; George A. Gordon, Boston; Charles W. SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue).

1. What do you think of a teacher who does not attend church services?

The teacher who does not attend the services of the church is by example destroying a large proportion of the good which might be accomplished through her instruction. The purpose of the school is not only to teach the Word of God, but also to train in religion and develop the spiritual life. One of the most necessary elements in the development of the spiritual life is regular church attendance. The teacher who is in earnest in her work will for her own sake and for the value of the example set, be found regularly in the place of worship.

2. What are some of the reasons for removing a teacher from the Sunday school staff?

Inability to teach clearly, inability to discipline, inability to interest class, lacking consecration, failure to prepare lesson, frequent absences, persistent tardiness, immaturity, old age, immorality, indiscretion, heterodox doctrinal views, lack of harmony with the administration, lacking interest in the work, ill health, neglect to perform required duties.

HOME TRAINING

JUVENILE BROTHERHOOD.

"Can't."

"Why not? I heard you crying them loud enough to be heard the distance of half a mile."

"Yes, but that was done in the other block where I could call at the top of my voice."

"What does that matter? Come now, no fooling; I'm in a hurry."

"Can't sell a paper in this block, mister, because it belongs to Limpy. He is just up at the other side. He'll be here in a few minutes. You'll meet him."

"And who is Limpy, and why does he have this block?"

"Because he is a cripple and this is the best block for selling papers; we paper boys have agreed that this should be Limpy's block, and the first chap caught selling papers here should be thrashed."

"Yes, I see, you have a sort of brotherhood among yourselves. I shall be very glad to wait for Limpy."

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

Christ's Triumphal Entry (Luke 19:29-40) for January 4.

1. How did Jesus prove his knowledge of prophecy in this incident?
2. How and why do we observe Palm Sunday?
3. What are some of the ways in which we can prepare a path for Jesus in the world and make him king?
4. What is the place and value of street processions and pageantry?
5. What kind of criticism is proper and useful in the church and what kind is blameworthy and harmful?
6. What is the responsibility of his followers toward the world's recognition of the kingship of Christ?

CLERICUS SAYS: Unless we know Christ to be the Saviour of our souls and the Lamb of God, we shall soon tire of singing hosannas in his train and want a king with more pretensions; but if we have learned who and what he is to us, then let us open our months wide, and not be afraid of letting the world hear our shout of praise.

Lesson Prayer.

Dear Jesus, we would be reminded of thy kingship. We come to thee today as a child comes to his father or his mother. We need thee! Fold us in thine arms, assure us of they forgiving love, and strengthen us for life's duties. In thy conquering name we pray. Amen.

Book Review.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

The Pageant of the Triumphal Entry
Making Christ Our King.
Luke 19:29-40.

International Lesson for January 4.
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

On the morning of Palm Sunday there was a great stir in Bethany and along the roads leading to Jerusalem. It was understood that Jesus was to enter the city that day. The people were gathering in crowds and seemed bent on signalizing his entrance with a great popular pageant. Jesus for the first time permitted a public recognition and celebration of his rights as Messiah and King. It was the springtime and a mass of fresh colors lay palpitating on the landscape, the air was balmy and fragrant with the breath of spring and over all the scene flashed the splendor of an Oriential sky.

An Eventful Day.

A colt was procured and the disciples, having thrown their robes on it, placed Jesus on it and the procession started. It would not have compared in magnitude with many a procession that attended the triumphal entry of a Roman conqueror or the coronation of a king or even the inauguration of a president, but it meant more for the world. Slowly the line of shouting followers and at the sunmit Jerusalem broke upon the view. The city sat like a jeweled crown on the brow of Mount Zion. In the foreground rose the marble walls of the temple stainless whiteness, crowned with its glittering gilded roof, a mass of snow and gold; in the background stretched the streets and squares of the city; and over it lay the spell of a thousand years of patriotic and sacred associations. At the first sight of the city Jesus burst into tears. What an unaccountable interruption of the festivities of the hour! Even in the midst of his joys and triumphs Jesus was a man of sorrows acquainted with grief and in the midst of our triumphs and gladdest hours we may have reason enough for tears. The procession passed on into the city and Jesus went up into the temple and cleansed it of its

The "Big Time" Is Behind Time.
"Punch 'em" Paul Is an Example.
How Jim Barton Rose to Fame.
Then There's Amelita Galli-Curci.
Corbett Didn't Surprise West.

Copyright, 1925, International Feature Service, Inc.

BY DAMON RUNYON

"I read with interest your recent article about fighters and actors who became over-night sensations in New York, or on what you call the 'big time,' after their ability had long been recognized elsewhere. Can you tell me instances other than those you mentioned?"

Perhaps it is a woman.

It is a flattering thought. The writer is always hoping he may have something to say that will interest the ladies.

"Punch 'Em" Paul Berienbach, the Asteria Ox, is a pugilistic example of what the writer had in mind in the article mentioned by the correspondent.

"Punch,'em" Paul can pack Madison Square Garden, the fistic "big time" house, or any outdoor arena, against almost any opponent, drawing distinguished bankers, and brokers and clubmen in evening attire.

Yet months before Berienbach appeared in the Garden he was fighting in the pugilistic outskirts of Manhattan Island packing National Guard armories and small clubs with less fashionable customers who were appreciating his ability when those who follow only the performers of the "big time" couldn't pronounce his name.

When he finally appeared in Madison Square Garden — packing the house—the "big time" patrons went away babbling, "where has this fellow been anyway?"

He brought no more ability to the Garden on that first appearance than his admirers knew he possessed. He did not surprise them. Yet he was a sensation, a new discovery, to the "big time."

Jim Barton was known for years to thousands of patrons of burlesque. He drew well as he toured the burlesque wheel. But his name meant nothing to the producers and patrons of the big Broadway shows.

One night Barton went to the Lexington avenue Opera house to appear at a benefit for the Actors Equity. Many prominent professionals were present, some of the best known names in the show business were on the bill.

The homely dancer and "comic" from burlesque shuffled on the stage, obscure, unknown. A few of the profession who happened to know him applauded politely. A few minutes later, Jim Barton was the talk of the town.

Everybody asked, "where has this man been?" Producers waited at the stage door to suggest terms to him.

To that same Lexington avenue Opera House, which is out of the way of the Broadway theatrical traffic, went one night a woman singer.

She had been trying to get booking in vaudeville. A few who heard her sing said she had a nice voice. Unfortunately for her their opinion had no weight with those who could give her a job.

At the Lexington avenue Opera House she sang the Shadow Song in "Dinorah." The next day men and women were raving about her. Her name was quite well known. It is Amelita Galli-Curci. Put on one of her records—you undoubtedly have one—and listen to her marvelous voice.

She had been in stock companies, her talent was undobtedly appreciated by many, who perhaps wondered why she wasn't better known.

She finally appeared in a play called "Conscience." The following morning she was famous. People were saying, "where has this woman been?"

Perhaps those who saw her outside New York are marveling at the sudden praise of her acting, and saying, "why, of course she can act—WE KNEW THAT!"

Will Rodgers, the ex-cowboy, was around for some years with his lariat, his chewing gum, his horse—yes, he had a horse—getting about $250 per week in vaudeville.

You may have seen him in his vaudeville days in your home town. If you did you undoubtedly are among those who liked his work.

Florenz Ziegfeld, the serious looking man who stages those wonderful shows, with the beautiful women, looked Harry Fitzgerald, a booking agent, askance, when Fitzgerald suggested that Ziegfeld put Rogers on the roof of the New Amsterdam, in the midnight show.

That was the last word in entertainment, in magnificence, at the time. The swells of the town packed around the tables to see the beautiful girls in their beautiful gowns. But Ziegfeld, a born showman, who would have made a great pugilistic promoter, saw the possibilities of Rogers act.

So Rogers appeared on the roof, among the beautiful girls in their gorgeous gowns a figure almost startling by contrast. He appeared before audiences that had never seen him before, and people looked at each other and said, "why he's good—where has he been all this time?"

Rogers is still with Ziegfeld. He is said to get a salary of $3,500 per week. He makes as much more in the movies, and in writing.

He is today one of the "big names" of the show business, a great humorist and with it a fine gentleman.

Twenty-three years ago there came East from the city of Denver, Colorado, a young fellow called Young Corbett.

The "ringworms" of the West knew he could fight. He had whipped Joe Bernstein, Kid Broad, Eddie Santry, Oscar Gardner and George Dixon, all good men.

But the East, especially New York City hadn't seen these performances—they hadn't taken place on Manhattan. Thus New York chose to ignore the record. To it this Yuong Corbett was wholly unknown.

He was pitted against the pugilistic pride of the big town, the great Terry McGovern. You could have any price you asked on Young Corbett. He knocked out McGovern in two rounds.

The East was stunned.

Men stared at each other, and said, "well what do you think of that?"

Out in Denver, and other cities of the west that had seen Corbett, they were surprised at the surprise of the East.

They thought it funny the East didn't know Corbett could fight, that it marveled over something that had been quite obvious to them. But it took another knockout of McGovern by Corbett to make the East agree with the West.

Holdout Rivals.

The Jolly holdout days are come,
The saddest of the year.
When players will mail their contracts back.
And spend their days in fear—
THAT THEY WON'T GET A NEW ONE.

ROCKIES REGION HAS PRETENDER TO GREB'S TITLE

Ring's Latest "Tiger" Has Built Impressive Record.

DENVER, Colo.—A serious contender for the world's middleweight boxing crown, which now adorns the cranium of Harry Greb, is looming in fistic circles of the Inter-Mountain region. He is Jack ("Tiger") Payne, rated the greatest negro fighter who has displayed his leather-pushing ringcraft in Colorado rings since the great Joe Gans invaded the Rockies some twenty years ago.

Payne is nineteen years of age. He was born in Denver, but moved to Chicago, where he learned he could fight and take 'em anywhere from the belt to the eyebrows by emerging with flying colors in rough-and-tumble alley battles. His rise up the pugilistic ladder during the past six months has been rapid. Fighting his way from obscurity into boxing prominence every night, was the achievement of Payne, ever was presented here.

The "Tiger" is being coached by Johnny Corbett, one of America's foremost ring mentors, who turned out Young Corbett (William Rothwell) and Abe Attell, formerly world's featherweight champions. Jack's capable teacher is immensely impressed by his pupil and believes Rayne will follow in the footsteps of Young Corbett by being the second Denver boxer to mount a fistic throne.

Payne has engaged in forty ring battles and has held his own against the field, winning thirty-two bouts by knockout. Just recently he defeated Jimmy Moore, of Cincinnati; "Speedball" Hayden, of Casper; Eddie St. Clair, of Salt Lake; Eddie Johnson, of Pubelo, and Mose Ferguson, lightheavyweight champion of Colorado.

W. As Sarconi, Denver sportsman, is managing the "Tiger" and is formulating plans to bring "Tiger" Flowers here for a match with Payne.

OHIO SPORTSMEN PROTEST ATTACK ON REFUGE BILL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 3.—Ohio sportsmen and bird lovers were appealed to today by officials of the league of Ohio Sportsmen to mail to their congressmen requests for immediate passage of the game refuge bill now pending in congress. The league officials called attention to what they termed "A perincious attack on the bill by a publicity agent of the Dupont Powder company, Wilmington, Del."

"Just why the Dupont Powder company permits its employe to assail a measure to conserve wild life which has been endorsed by game commissioners, bird lovers, foresters, grangers and sportsmen throughtout the nation is a mystery to us," league officials said.

The game refuge bill is endorsed and sppported by the American Game Protective association; the Isaak Walton league; National Exchange clubs; the League of Ohio Sportsmen; and similar organizations in every state, it was declared. A protest from the league of Ohio Sportsman against the attack on the bill, to be sent to the president of the Dupont company, was being planned today.

"LITTLE FELLOWS" HAD THEIR INNINGS

By Norman E. Brown.

The so-called minor branches of sport went through the greatest year they have ever enjoyed. The brilliant performances of the leading lights in some of those branches carried their fields into the realms of major sports.

Polo, by virtue of the international matches at Meadowbrook, entered the role of major sports. Thanks to the playing of Capt. Devereaux Milburn and his mates America retained the trophy by defeating Great Britain in two straight matches.

The record breaking performances of Gertrude Ederle and Johnny Weismuller in the water drew large slices of the limelight to them and the swimming game. Weismuller won two Olympic championships. Miss Ederle's best effort was a new record of 2:41 1-5 for the 220-yard free-style swim.

Auto racing suffered the most disastrous season in its history. Jimmy Murphy, leader in the race for the point championship of the year, was killed. Dario Resta, Joe Boyer and Earl Wilson were also victims of the speedways.

Pop Geers' death was the tragic event of the light harness racing season.

Wrestling was perhaps the one sport that failed to draw much interest during the year. Ed "Strangler" Lewis retained the professional heavyweight title. The interest in this sport, however, continues to decline.

From Holland came one of the year's stars in the bicycle game. Peter Moeskops won the world's bike title in Paris for the fourth consecutive year. Then he came to the United States and won 16 out of 19 match races against leading American riders.

Epinard's efforts to turn back American's turf stars in a series of three international races were unsuccessful but won for the horse and his owner, Pierre Wertheimer, much popularity and friendship.

GRAND PRIX TO BE RUN OVER NEW TRACK IN MADRID

MADRID, Jan. 3.—It has been decided that the 1926 Automobile Grand Prix will takke place in Spain, and the Spanish Automobile club is casting around for a suitable speedway on which to hold the race.

Construction of a magnificent new speedway near Madrid, the largest in the world, practically has been decided upon. A company has been formed for the purpose, with a capital of four million pesetas, and the ground necessary is said to have been purchased at Cantillejas, near the Madrid-Allicante road.

The organizers are making arrangements to race a part of the 1926 Grand Prix on the new speedway, and roads in the vicinity will be thoroughly renovated so as to join up with other roads for the race, thus forming a circuit similar to that at Monza, near Milan.

It is possible that the speedway will be finished within a year.

Walt Johnson Gives Lesson in Humility

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3—Walter Johnson, star that he is, has a far different make-up from that of Babe Ruth.

Ruth demanded and received as high as $2,500 a game for some of the games in which he participated on the Coast. For the three-game series in San Francisco, Ruth was paid the lump sum of $6,500.

When the Oakland ball players decided they wanted to stage an exhibition before the lid went on, they wired Johnson, asking his best terms.

"I'll not only come, but I'll take a chance with the other players. Give me a cut along with the boys."

That was the message from Johnson.

He came, and the rainy weather knocked a prospective crowd for a row of goals. There wasn't much "sugar" for the ball players to divide. Yet Johnson, who is no prima donna, went through with his agreement and pitched five innings.

ERIE SWIMMERS SET NEW RECORD

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 3—Erie Y. M. C. A. relay swimming team last night established a new world's record for 160 yards when they defeated the Brooklyn Central Y team in 1:15 4-5. The old mark was held by Yale university and was 1:16 2-3; O'Dea, Cross, Smith and Wright composed the Erie team.

Last Night's Fights

FIGHT FANS SET FOR HOT BATTLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Fight fans were looking forward today to one of the toughest battles of the season, when Tiger Flowers, colored light heavyweight from Atlanta, will face Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., in a 12-round contest on January 16 at Madison Square Garden. Both men are hard hitters.

ENGLISH TENNIS CHAMPS TO SAIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—J. C. F. Simpson and R. C. O. Williams, doubles champions of England for 1922 and 1923, are expected to come to America to play in the American national championships, tennis officials said today. They will compete probably in both doubles and singles.

COLLEGE CAGERS OPEN SCHEDULE

YALE PUCK TEAM WINS CLOSE TILT

To Defend Coast Title.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—Miss Marion Hollins, former national woman golf champion, will not be a member of the American team that will compete in the British championship next Spring. She says that she plans to leave for California this month to defend her title in the annual Pebble Beach tournament.

FASANO TAKES ON TREMAINE

Headline Zill's Youngstown Card Monday Night.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 3—Matchmaker Al. Zill intends to open the new year right, fistically, and with this in view, will send up Frankie Fasano, of New York, and Carl Tremaine, of Cleveland, in the main scrap of the card he has arranged for Monday night in the Rayen-Wood auditorium.

Tremaine and Fasano will meet in a 12-rounder. The Clevelander needs little introduction to fight fans of the district, and although Fasano is a newcomer to the state his record has spoken a lot for him in advance.

The little Italian lad sprang into prominence by gaining a three-round verdict over Jack Sharkey and then coming back with a decision over Irish Johnny Curtin. He accomplished the latter job thoroughly, leaving the New Jersey youth in such bad shape that he was unable to go through with his scheduled match here with Rosey Stoy.

The scrap between Tremaine and Fasano may have an important bearing on a decision as to the logical contender to meet Eddie "Cannonball" Martin for the title.

1924 PROVED BIG YEAR FOR SPORT THRILLS ANYWAY

The year 1925 may produce some brilliant sport. It is doubtful, however, if it will produce a greater number of real heart-stopping moments than its predecessor.

There was, for instance, that moment when Walter Johnson, pitching with his back to the wall, faced Long George Kelly of the Giants with two down in the twelfth and final inning of the last world's series game. The elongated first baseman, a wicked hitter and a shrewd batter, stood between Johnson and victory and the fame and glory that was wrapped up to go with it. Johnson struck him out.

And in golf—

When Walter Hagen laid his ball seven feet away from the cup on the last green in the British open championship play and then took his stance for the putt that meant the world title for the second time in three years or only a chance to play off a tie. He sunk the putt.

In the women's ranks—

Mary Browne, repeating her sensational playing of 1923, fought her way through the semi-final match of the national women's tourney with Glenna Collett, young and powerful, as her opponent. They came to the last hole with Miss Browne down one. She drove her ball into the rough. The match seemed lost. Calmly Miss Browne selected a brassie and made one of the prettiest shots of the tournament. She squared the match and won it on the nineteenth green.

Other tense moments might be cited.

How about the moment when Yale went into the third period of its game with Harvard apparently beaten and then uncorked a driving attack that wiped out those goals of Gehrke's and placed the Bulldog on top?

Tennis fans who say the semi-final match in the national tennis tourney between Vincent Richards and Big Bill Tilden never hope to see more tennis crowded into a few moments than they saw when Richards forced the king of them all to five sets before going down to a glorious defeat.

Rises to Heights By Beating Danny Kramer Into Pulp

By Ford Frick.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—"Swish! Bang! Biff! Smash!"

"Whoop! Whoop! Hooray!"

For Louis "Kid" Kaplan last night drove himself into a featherweight championship with vicious rights and lefts that wounded and beat off the defenseless body of Danny Kramer like rising breakers against storm-swept rocks.

For eight rounds Kaplan swung, swung and swung. For eight rounds Kramer stood up to the punishment, his face battered and bleeding, his right eye cut to a pulp, his nose and ears spurting blood.

Each round it seemed that it must end; each round the Philadelphian staggered and wobbled and tottered like an oak before the axe of a master woodsman. But still he kept his feet, fighting blindly with the instinct of a bulldog that knows no defeat but oblivion.

The fans, standing on their chairs like wolves howling for a kill, sickened at the massacre.

"Stop it! Stop it!" they cried.

But still they fought on and still Kaplan's fists flew like driving pistons carrying him on to a championship.

Then in the ninth the end came.

Out of Kramer's corner a towel came hurtling—a towel stained and reddened with the blood of the battler who stood in mid-ring, too dazed to know what had happened; too dazed to realize that a generous second had brought merciful surcease from punishment that seemed endless.

With blood spurting from his nose, his face a gory smear, his eye closed, Kramer was led back to his corner. He staggered and tottered, but he tried to push his seconds away. He wanted to fight—wanted to keep going; wanted to carry on.

But he couldn't. Kaplan carried too many guns.

And so it ended—a fight that will go down into boxing history as one of the most vicious of all time.

And so it was that Meriden, Conn., made the old garden ring with its cheering as it welcomed its own featherweight champion, a champion who bore his honors proudly above his bruised nose and cut features; a champion whose first act was to step over and shake the hand of his broken opponent.

It was a fight without science, a fight filled with sheer slugging. Kramer drove for the body; Kaplan shot for the head and Kaplan landed three to Kramer's nose. The result was inevitable.

Some nine thousand fans saw the bouts—saw them with an enthusiasm that promised to sweep the building from its foundations.

MILLER Tires and Tubes are made from the same rubber that goes into Miller's world standard surgical supplies and rubber sundries. In the initial preparation, the workmen do not know whether they are mixing rubber for tires or for the most delicate rubber goods on earth. They only know that every ounce of rubber must be as nearly perfect as man can make it!

BY DAMON RUNYON

I read with interest your recent article about fighters and actors who became over-night sensations in New York, or on what you call the 'big time,' after their ability had long been recognized elsewhere. Can you tell me instances other than those you mentioned?"

HUS a correspondent, signing "E. F." in purple ink on blue paper. Perhaps it is a woman. It is a flattering thought. The writer always hoping he may have something to say that will interest the lies.

"Punch 'Em" Paul Berlenbach, the iteria Ox, is a pugilistic example of hat the writer had in mind in the ticle mentioned by the correspondnt.

"Punch 'em" Paul can pack Madison quare Garden, the fistic "big time" ouse, or any outdoor arena, against most any opponent, drawing disnguished bankers, and brokers and ubmen in evening attire.

Yet months before Berlenbach apeared in the Garden he was fighting the pugilistic outskirts of Manhatn Island packing National Guard arories and small clubs with less fashnable customers who were appreciting his ability when those who fol w only the performers of the "big me" couldn't pronounce his name.

When he finally appeared in Madon Square Garden — packing the ouse—the "big time" patrons went way babbling, "where has this fellow een anyway?"

He brought no more ability to the arden on that first appearance than is admirers knew he possessed. He id not surprise them. Yet he was sensation, a new discovery, to the big time."

Jim Barton was known for years to housands of patrons of burlesque. ie drew well as he toured the buresque wheel. But his name meant othing to the producers and patrons f the big Broadway shows.

One night Barton went to the Lexngton avenue Opera house to appear t a benefit for the Actors Equity. any prominent professionals were resent, some of the best known ames in the show business were on he bill.

The homely dancer and "comic" from burlesque shuffled on the stage, obscure, unknown. A few of the profession who happened to know him applauded politely. A few minutes later, Jim Barton was the talk of the town.

Everybody asked, "where has this man been?" Producers waited at the stage door to suggest terms to him.

To that same Lexington avenue Opera House, which is out of the way of the Broadway theatrical traffic, went one night a woman singer.

She had been trying to get booking in vaudeville. A few who heard her sing said she had a nice voice. Unfortunately for her their opinion had no weight with those who could give her a job.

At the Lexington avenue Opera House she sang the Shadow Song in "Dinorah." The next day men and women were raving about her. Her name was quite well known. It is Amelita Galli-Curci. Put on one of her records—you undoubtedly have one—and listen to her marvelous voice.

She had been in stock companies, her talent was undobtedly appreciated by many, who perhaps wondered why she wasn't better known.

She finally appeared in a play called "Conscience." The following morning she was famous. People were saying, "where has this woman been?"

Perhaps those who saw her outside New York are marveling at the sudden praise of her acting, and saying, "why, of course she can act—WE KNEW THAT!"

Will Rodgers, the ex-cowboy, was around for some years with his lariat, his chewing gum, his horse—yes, he had a horse—getting about $250 per week in vaudeville.

You may have seen him in his vaudeville days in your home town. If you did you undoubtedly are among those who liked his work.

Florenz Ziegfeld, the serious looking man who stages those wonderful shows, with the beautiful women, looked Harry Fitzgerald, a booking agent, askance, when Fitzgerald suggested that Ziegfeld put Rogers on the roof of the New Amsterdam, in the midnight show.

That was the last word in entertainment, in magnificence, at the time. The swells of the town packed around the tables to see the beautiful girls in their beautiful gowns. But Ziegfeld, a born showman, who would have made a great pugilistic promoter, saw the possibilities of Rogers act.

So Rogers appeared on the roof, among the beautiful girls in their gorgeous gowns a figure almost startling by contrast. He appeared before audiences that had never seen him before, and people looked at each other and said, "why he's good—where has he been all this time?"

Rogers is still with Ziegfeld. He is said to get a salary of $3,500 per week. He makes as much more in the movies, and in writing.

He is today one of the "big names" of the show business, a great humorist and with it a fine gentleman.

Twenty-three years ago there came East from the city of Denver, Colorado, a young fellow called Young Corbett.

The "ringworms" of the West knew he could fight. He had whipped Joe Bernstein, Kid Broad, Eddie Santry, Oscar Gardner and George Dixon, all good men.

But the East, especially New York City hadn't seen these performances—they hadn't taken place on Manhattan. Thus New York chose to ignore the record. To it this Yuong Corbett was wholly unknown.

He was pitted against the pugilistic pride of the big town, the great Terry McGovern. You could have any price you asked on Young Corbett. He knocked out McGovern in two rounds.

The East was stunned.

Men stared at each other, and said, "well what do you think of that?"

Out in Denver, and other cities of the west that had seen Corbett, they were surprised at the surprise of the East.

They thought it funny the East didn't know Corbett could fight, that it marveled over something that had been quite obvious to them. But it took another knockout of McGovern by Corbett to make the East agree with the West.

Holdout Rivals.

The Jolly holdout days are come,
The saddest of the year.
When players will mail their contracts back.
And spend their days in fear—
THAT THEY WON'T GET A NEW ONE.

Kid Kaplan Is Crowned King of Featherweights

ROCKIES REGION HAS PRETENDER TO GREB'S TITLE

Ring's Latest "Tiger" Has Built Impressive Record.

DENVER, Colo.—A serious contender for the world's middleweight boxing crown, which now adorns the cranium of Harry Greb, is looming in fistic circles of the Inter-Mountain region. He is Jack ("Tiger") Payne, rated the greatest negro fighter who has displayed his leather-pushing ringcraft in Colorado rings since the great Joe Gans invaded the Rockies some twenty years ago.

Payne is nineteen years of age. He was born in Denver, but moved to Chicago, where he learned he could fight and take 'em anywhere from the belt to the eyebrows by emerging with flying colors in rough-and-tumble alley battles. His rise up the pugilistic ladder during the past six months has been rapid. Fighting his way from obscurity into boxing prominence every night, was the achievement of Payne, ever was presented here.

The "Tiger" is being coached by Johnny Corbett, one of America's foremost ring mentors, who turned out Young Corbett (William Rothwell) and Abe Attell, formerly world's featherweight champions. Jack's capable teacher is immensely impressed by his pupil and believes Rayne will follow in the footsteps of Young Corbett by being the second Denver boxer to mount a fistic throne.

Payne has engaged in forty ring battles and has held his own against the field, winning thirty-two bouts by knockout. Just recently he defeated Jimmy Moore, of Cincinnati; "Speedball" Hayden, of Casper; Eddie St. Clair, of Salt Lake; Eddie Johnson, of Pubelo, and Mose Ferguson, light-heavyweight champion of Colorado.

W. A. Sarconi, Denver sportsman, is managing the "Tiger" and is formulating plans to bring "Tiger" Flowers here for a match with Payne.

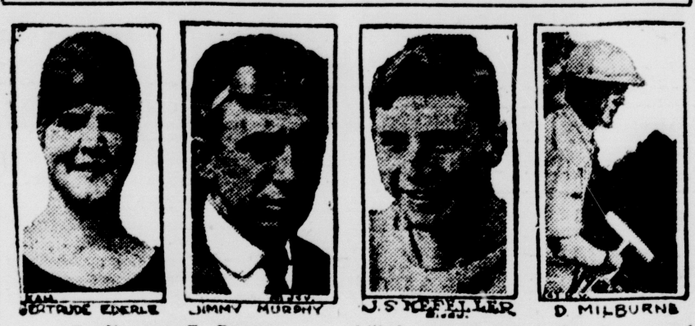
OHIO SPORTSMEN PROTEST ATTACK ON REFUGE BILL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 3.—Ohio sportsmen and bird lovers were appealed to today by officials of the league of Ohio Sportsmen to mail to their congressmen requests for immediate passage of the game refuge bill now pending in congress. The league officials called attention to what they termed "A pernicious attack on the bill by a publicity agent of the Dupont Powder company, Wilmington, Del."

"Just why the Dupont Powder company permits its employe to assail a measure to conserve wild life which has been endorsed by game commissioners, bird lovers, foresters, grangers and sportsmen throughtout the nation is a mystery to us," league officials said.

The game refuge bill is endorsed and sppported by the American Game Protective association; the Isaak Walton league; National Exchange clubs; the League of Ohio Sportsmen; and similar organizations in every state, it was declared. A protest from the league of Ohio Sportsman against the attack on the bill, to be sent to the president of the Dupont company, was being planned today.

"LITTLE FELLOWS" HAD THEIR INNINGS



By Norman E. Brown.

The so-called minor branches of sport went through the greatest year they have ever enjoyed. The brilliant performances of the leading lights in some of those branches carried their fields into the realms of major sports.

Polo, by virtue of the international matches at Meadowbrook, entered the role of major sports. Thanks to the playing of Capt. Devereaux Milburn and his mates America retained the trophy by defeating Great Britain in two straight matches.

The record breaking performances of Gertrude Ederle and Johnny Weismuller in the water drew large slices of the limelight to them and the swimming game. Weismuller won two Olympic championships. Miss Ederle's best effort was a new record of 2:41 1-5 for the 220-yard free-style swim.

Auto racing suffered the most disastrous season in its history. Jimmy Murphy, leader in the race for the point championship of the year, was killed. Dario Resta, Joe Boyer and Earl Wilson were also victims of the speedways.

Pop Geers' death was the tragic event of the light harness racing season.

Wrestling was perhaps the one sport that failed to draw much interest during the year. Ed "Strangler" Lewis retained the professional heavyweight title. The interest in this sport, however, continues to decline.

From Holland came one of the year's stars in the bicycle game. Peter Moeskops won the world's bike title in Paris for the fourth consecutive year. Then he came to the United States and won 16 out of 19 match races against leading American riders.

Epinard's efforts to turn back American's turf stars in a series of three international races were unsuccessful but won for the horse and his owner, Pierre Wertheimer, much popularity and friendship.

GRAND PRIX TO BE RUN OVER NEW TRACK IN MADRID

MADRID, Jan. 3.—It has been decided that the 1926 Automobile Grand Prix will takke place in Spain, and the Spanish Automobile club is casting around for a suitable speedway on which to hold the race.

Construction of a magnificent new speedway near Madrid, the largest in the world, practically has been decided upon. A company has been formed for the purpose, with a capital of four million pesetas, and the ground necessary is said to have been purchased at Cantillejas, near the Madrid-Allicante road.

The organizers are making arrangements to race a part of the 1926 Grand Prix on the new speedway, and roads in the vicinity will be thoroughly renovated so as to join up with other roads for the race, thus forming a circuit similar to that at Monza, near Milan.

It is possible that the speedway will be finished within a year.

Walt Johnson Gives Lesson in Humility

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3—Walter Johnson, star that he is, has a far different make-up from that of Babe Ruth.

Ruth demanded and received as high as $2,500 a game for some of the games in which he participated on the Coast. For the three-game series in San Francisco, Ruth was paid the lump sum of $6,500.

When the Oakland ball players decided they wanted to stage an exhibition before the lid went on, they wired Johnson, asking his best terms.

"I'll not only come, but I'll take a chance with the other players. Give me a cut along with the boys."

That was the message from Johnson.

He came, and the rainy weather knocked a prospective crowd for a row of goals. There wasn't much "sugar" for the ball players to divide. Yet Johnson, who is no prima donna, went through with his agreement and pitched five innings.

ERIE SWIMMERS SET NEW RECORD

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 3.—Erie Y. M. C. A. relay swimming team last night established a new world's record for 160 yards when they defeated the Brooklyn Central Y team in 1:15 4-5. The old mark was held by Yale university and was 1:16 2-3; O'Dea, Cross, Smith and Wright composed the Erie team.

Last Night's Fights

FIGHT FANS SET FOR HOT BATTLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Fight fans were looking forward today to one of the toughest battles of the season, when Tiger Flowers, colored light heavyweight from Atlanta, will face Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., in a 12-round contest on January 16 at Madison Square Garden. Both men are hard hitters.

ENGLISH TENNIS CHAMPS TO SAIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—J. C. F. Simpson and R. C. O. Williams, doubles champions of England for 1922 and 1923, are expected to come to America to play in the American national championships, tennis officials said today. They will compete probably in both doubles and singles.

COLLEGE CAGERS OPEN SCHEDULE

NEW YORK, June 3.—The eastern inter-collegiate basketball season opens tonight with Pennsylvania clashing with Yale at Philadelphia.

YALE PUCK TEAM WINS CLOSE TILT

To Defend Coast Title.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—Miss Marion Hollins, former national woman golf champion, will not be a member of the American team that will compete in the British championship next Spring. She says that she plans to leave for California this month to defend her title in the annual Pebble Beach tournament.

FASANO TAKES ON TREMAINE

Headline Zill's Youngstown Card Monday Night.

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 3—Matchmaker Al. Zill intends to open the new year right, fistically, and with this in view, will send up Frankie Fasano, of New York, and Carl Tremaine, of Cleveland, in the main scrap of the card he has arranged for Monday night in the Rayen-Wood auditorium.

Tremaine and Fasano will meet in a 12-rounder. The Clevelander needs little introduction to fight fans of the district, and although Fasano is a newcomer to the state his record has spoken a lot for him in advance.

The little Italian lad sprang into prominence by gaining a three-round verdict over Jack Sharkey and then coming back with a decision over Irish Johnny Curtin. He accomplished the latter job thoroughly, leaving the New Jersey youth in such bad shape that he was unable to go through with his scheduled match here with Rosey Stoy.

The scrap between Tremaine and Fasano may have an important bearing on a decision as to the logical contender to meet Eddie "Cannonball" Martin for the title.

1924 PROVED BIG YEAR FOR SPORT THRILLS ANYWAY

The year 1925 may produce some brilliant sport. It is doubtful, however, if it will produce a greater number of real heart-stopping moments than its predecessor.

There was, for instance, that moment when Walter Johnson, pitching with his back to the wall, faced Long George Kelly of the Giants with two down in the twelfth and final inning of the last world's series game. The elongated first baseman, a wicked hitter and a shrewd batter, stood between Johnson and victory and the fame and glory that was wrapped up to go with it. Johnson struck him out.

And in golf—

When Walter Hagen laid his ball seven feet away from the cup on the last green in the British open championship play and then took his stance for the putt that meant the world title for the second time in three years or only a chance to play off a tie. He sunk the putt.

In the women's ranks—

Mary Browne, repeating her sensational playing of 1923, fought her way through the semi-final match of the national women's tourney with Glenna Collett, young and powerful, as her opponent. They came to the last hole with Miss Browne down one. She drove her ball into the rough. The match seemed lost. A Hint for Beginners

The cross-word puzzle diagram is merely a means of concealing words which are synonymous to those listed and which will interlock perfectly and so read equally well crosswise of downwards. Always look for the number of the synonym on the diagram. If horizontal, you must find a word to fit between that number and the first shaded stop to the right; if vertical, you must fit your word between the number and the first shaded stop below.

Not since the days of the old river boats has there been seen a more typical old-time minstrel show than the 38th annual edition of the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which Manager Edward Conrad will present at the Ceramic theatre, Tuesday, January 6. All the atmosphere and characteristics of the good old time minstrelsy are present. To hear Jack Richards sing "Mother, O My Mother" in his clear, and powerful tenor voice, alone is worth the price of admission. And there is Billy Church, another bell-like tenor, who fairly thrills you with "The Story of the Rosary." Nick Hufford, as a comedian, has few equals on the minstrel stage. He is a loose page from the book of fun, and is ably assisted by Harry Frankel, the boy from old Kentucky, Harry Shunk, Jack Kenned and Johnny Healy.

No minstrel show is complete without its dancing, and Billy and Leo Doran possess such nimble feet that they almost seem to be automatic. There is song, harmony, melody, comedy and dancing in this year's show. And above all, there is atmosphere. There is a pleasure yacht, sailing the seas, with everyone on board keeping time to the waves. There is Holland, the land of windmills and wooden shoes; and Spain, where romance runs high, and song and dance are the life.

This year's production is more elaborate than any previous one. The costumes are more gorgeous and unique in design. The songs are more appealing, the comedy more clever and the dancing more intricate. And still, through it all, runs the backbone of the old-time art of minstrelsy—the charm of the old customs and the appeal of the old melodies.

Critics in the cities where it has played, have been enthusiastic in their praise of this newest production of the Field organization. The seat sale opened today.

Pupils Take Machine Belonging to Teacher; Enjoy Great Thrill

WICHITA, Kan. — Tired of school life and desiring a "fling and a thrill," two boys and two girls, all about 14 years old and members of a grade school here, stole an automobile belonging to their teacher and started out for Kansas City, according to a story told police by one of the boys, who "got scared" and jumped out of the car after it had gone a few miles.

Warren Speer, who "got scared" and jumped, returned to school and told his teacher of the affair. He said they had planned to drive to Kansas City. The other children are Dorothea Leonhart, 14; Hazel Hull, 14, and Lewis Homan, 15.

A Hint for Beginners

The cross-word puzzle diagram is merely a means of concealing words which are synonymous to those listed and which will interlock perfectly and so read equally well crosswise or downwards. Always look for the number of the synonym on the diagram. If horizontal, you must find a word to fit between that number and the first shaded stop to the right; if vertical, you must fit your word between the number and the first shaded stop below.

Not since the days of the old river boats has there been seen a more typical old-time minstrel show than the 38th annual edition of the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which Manager Edward Conrad will present at the Ceramic theatre, Tuesday, January 6. All the atmosphere and characteristics of the good old time minstrelsy are present. To hear Jack Richards sing "Mother, O My Mother" in his clear, and powerful tenor voice, alone is worth the price of admission. And there is Billy Church, another bell-like tenor, who fairly thrills you with "The Story of the Rosary." Nick Hufford, as a comedian, has few equals on the minstrel stage. He is a loose page from the book of fun, and is ably assisted by Harry Frankel, the boy from old Kentucky, Harry Shunk, Jack Kenned and Johnny Healy.

No minstrel show is complete without its dancing, and Billy and Leo Doran possess such nimble feet that they almost seem to be automatic. There is song, harmony, melody, comedy and dancing in this year's show. And above all, there is atmosphere. There is a pleasure yacht, sailing the seas, with everyone on board keeping time to the waves. There is Holland, the land of windmills and wooden shoes; and Spain, where romance runs high, and song and dance are the life.

This year's production is more elaborate than any previous one. The costumes are more gorgeous and unique in design. The songs are more appealing, the comedy more clever and the dancing more intricate. And still, through it all, runs the backbone of the old-time art of minstrelsy—the charm of the old customs and the appeal of the old melodies.

Critics in the cities where it has played, have been enthusiastic in their praise of this newest production of the Field organization. The seat sale opened today.

Tallest Athlete.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—Francis ("Stretch") Meehan, the lanky center of the Trenton, (N. J.) professional basketball team, is the tallest athlete in captivity. Meehan is 6 feet 8 inches and was used as a yardstick by the Trenton basketball moguls when they laid out their court.

Pupils Take Machine Belonging to Teacher; Enjoy Great Thrill

WICHITA, Kan. — Tired of school life and desiring a "fling and a thrill," two boys and two girls, all about 11 years old and members of a grade school here, stole an automobile belonging to their teacher and started out for Kansas City, according to a story told police by one of the boys, who "got scared" and jumped out of the car after it had gone a few miles.

Warren Speer, who "got scared" and jumped, returned to school and told his teacher of the affair. He said they had planned to drive to Kansas City. The other children are Dorothea Leonhart, 14; Hazel Hull, 14, and Lewis Homan, 15.

Sunday School

unholy traffic. In the evening the crowds dispersed, and Jesus quitely returned to Bethany. Nothing seems to have been accomplished. Never will Jesus be made king by any pagentry and pomp. Yet the triumphal entry had deep and rich signifficance.

The Procession.

The disciples cast their garments down and scattered greenery on the dusty roadway and thus transformed it into a path of beauty. Disciples must still prepare the way for Jesus. He cannot go through the world in a triumphal march unless we go with him before him and make a path for him. Human agencies may open the way along which the Spirit of Christ gets into human hearts and also into the world. This may be a costly road to build and we must put it into our most precious things. And the path should be one of beauty. The highway along which Jesus travels should not seem to be a hard and dusty road, but should be so carpeted and festooned that it will be a way of pleasantness and a path of peace. The people should as they passed along, and in answer to the question, "Who is this?" they answered, "This is the prophet, Jesus, from Nazareth of Galilee." It took some courage to say that up in Jerusalem, and we still need boldness and bravery in proclaiming Jesus Christ the rightful King of this world. This spirit of feverency is evaporating out of our religious life. We are growing so reserved and formal that we are afraid to speak out in our religious meetings. Even the Methodists are ceasing to shout. We need more freedom and fervency and fire in our religious life and on proper occasions should not think it unseemly to let our emotions loose.

Desecration In the Temple.

A shocking scene met the view of Jesus in the temple. Business had invaded its holy precincts with noisy hawking and bargaining. Jesus ordered the traders out, and they fled before the majesty of his person and the starry light in his eyes. The house of worship should be kept clear and clean of all unfitting and desecrating uses. More difficult and necessary is it that we should keep out wrong thoughts and motives as we worship in it. If while listening to the prophet up in the pulpit we are only calculating profits down in the pew, or if we are cherishing thoughts of pride and vanity, we are indeed desecrating the house of God as truly as though we were noisily transacting in it the business of the office and market.

Criticism.

Criticism was not wanting on this occasion. When was there ever a day or an event so successful and good that somebody did not find fault? We could infallibly name the critics on this occasion without seeing the record. "Some of the Pharisees!" Bigoted and blind to the last; never knowing the day of their opportunity; zealous for the temple of the Lord and rejecting the Lord of the temple! The enthusiasm was so contagious that the very children were crying out their Hosannas, and it was the children, too, that criticism seized upon and objected to. Even yet young people cannot show unusual interest and earnestness and enthusiasm in the church without exciting the displeasure of some critics. The great day ended and nothing came of it. Jesus was not yet king. And never will he be king by such means. He, however, experienced no disappointment, for he knew that the kingdom of God cometh not with observation.

SICK 3 YEARS WITHOUT RELIEF

Columbia, S. C. — "Your medicine has done me so much good that I feel like I owe my life to it. For three years I was sick and was treated by physicians, but they didn't seem to help me any. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got strong enough to do my housework, where before I was hardly able to be up. I have also taken the Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and it has left me in good health. I recommend it as the best medicine for women in the Change of Life and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. S. A. HOLLEY, R. F. D. No. 4, Columbia, South Carolina.
Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness, painful times and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring relief? Take it when annoying symptoms first appear and avoid years of suffering.
In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 200,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use.
